The 128th volume of the Razorback Yearbook served to capture how this university and the city of Fayetteville is home to all of its students. This book is dedicated to the beautiful city that students choose to call home. From the engraved sidewalks to endless hills, this college town finds a way to steal everyone's heart. Fayetteville ranked in the top 10 "Best Places to Live in the U.S." in 2024 by U.S. News, and this book highlights why. The parts of campus and Fayetteville that students love like the farmer's market, Greek theater, and football stadium, are shown throughout this book. From the start of freshman year to senior year this campus, this town, and this state start to feel more and more like home. Even beyond graduation, this is home.

All the headlines are in Abril Fatface and body text is Regular Arial. Bylines are in 6pt, body text is 10pt, and the headlines vary. The cover is a soft matte material. The software used to create and organize the book included Adobe InDesign, Adobe Photoshop, Adobe Lightroom, Google suite, Microsoft OneDrive, and BoxSync. Thanks to the editors, staff, advisors, and student media department 1700 volumes of the 128th volume went to print.

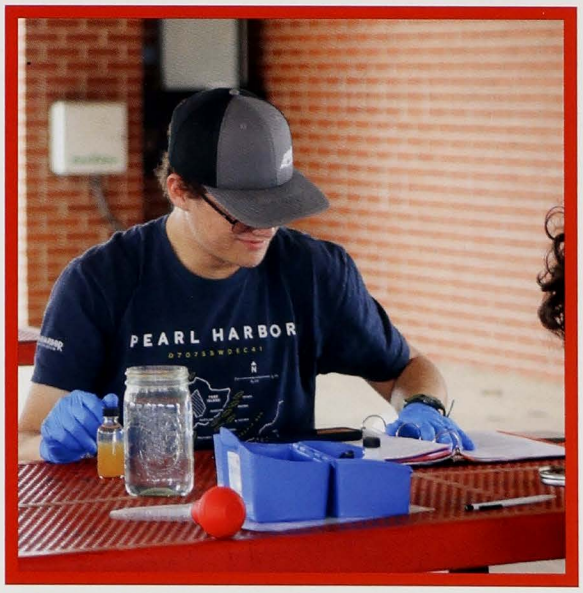
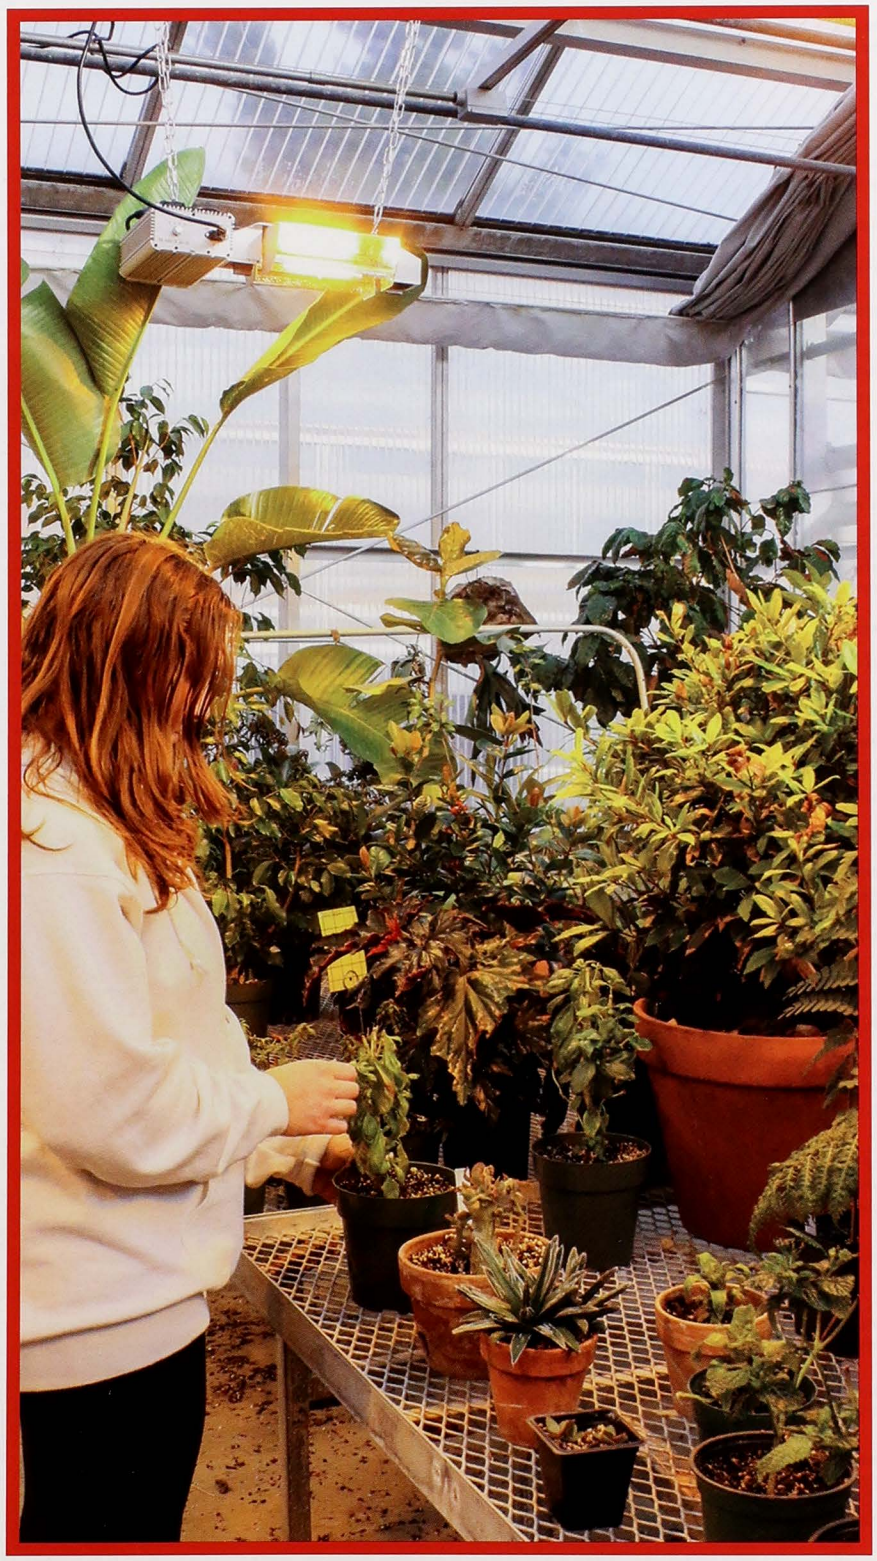
DALE BUMPERS

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURAL, FOOD AND LIFE SCIENCE





STUDENT INVOLVEMENT IN FFA

Comprising 7.7% of the total student population at the University of Arkansas, the Dale Bumper School of Agricultural Food and Life Sciences fosters an extremely tight-knit community. One of only 30 on-campus clubs within the college, The Alumni Future Farmers of America expanded leadership skills for high school and university students through conferences and mentorship.

The Future Farmers of America created opportunities for prospective agriculture students and enthusiasts to form career connections and skills while still in high school.

“FFA is like a sport,” said sophomore agricultural communications major Cambry Brown. “You create these connections and travel with your best friends and it’s the best time of your life”

Brown, like many agricultural students, discovered the Alumni Future Farmers of America at a high school leadership conference.

“Each year at national and state conventions I would see this girl working the University of Arkansas booth and she was what I thought of when I thought of the U of A,” said Brown. “She was a Bumpers ambassador, and it was cool to see her in high school and get advice... now she’s one of my really good friends.”

As a sophomore and AFFA President, Brown focused on connecting with Bumpers students.

“One of the grad students had the idea to post on the Bumpers Instagram page and co-post with our [AFFA] account because our account is small,” said Brown, “You can see social media and see everything through pictures but it’s nice to make a connection face to face.”

All meet night, a monthly meeting of every Bumpers club, facilitated in person connection for students as well.

“I think it’s our purpose to give back to an organization that gives so much to us,” said Brown. “... to see the other side of [FFA] and make kids smile like someone made you smile when you were in high school.”

FAY JONES

SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE AND DESIGN

ARCHITECTURE STUDIO

The Fay Jones School of Architecture and Design ranks as the eighth-best architectural program among public universities, according to the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture. The opportunities the college presents for its students to excel are essential to its mission of advancing design excellence.

For senior Madison Harper, graduation is fast approaching, prompting her to reflect fondly on the past five years in the program.

"I would say I have some really amazing professors and advisors that have helped me through a lot," Harper said. "Even just with the job search, asking them questions about a job offer and what questions asked during interviews, they've been really helpful with that."

Fay Jones emphasizes direct field involvement, offering unique opportunities such as study abroad programs and field trips to acclaimed architectural sites, providing real-world exposure and context.

"I absolutely love the studio culture, as it's such a different experience than just sitting in a classroom," Harper said. "Being in studio 'forces' you to work with people, and you make new friends that you wouldn't think you would meet otherwise."

For sophomore Mason Newman, being an architecture major is demanding, and balancing life and academic responsibilities can often be a challenge. Newman said the program is worth the time and effort because it provides hands-on experience that prepares him for his long-term career goals.

"For the most part, you're actually designing something rather than just memorizing information for a test, which is really enjoyable," Newman said. "It feels more rewarding because you're actually coming up with something,"

Fay Jones' dedication to fostering a welcoming and supportive environment leads its students to grow in their chosen field of study, providing professional guidance and expanding their set of skills.

"It's like using your brain in a different way than I had to during high school," Newman said.

J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT

COLLEGE OF THE ARTS AND SCIENCES

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS

The namesake of the Fulbright College of Arts and Sciences, J. William Fulbright created the Fulbright Exchange of Scholars Program back in 1946. His program allowed students to pursue an education outside of their home country by swapping places with one another. Since its inception over 75 years ago, students from all over benefit from this program, especially those pursuing liberal arts degrees.

Being the largest college on the University of Arkansas' campus, with 19 different academic departments, Fulbright offers a wide selection of courses and electives to pick from. For the students used to fewer choices at their home university, this came as a pleasant surprise.

Japanese student, Leonhard Kimura-Macke enjoyed the opportunity to choose classes that interested him, on top of the ones related to his intercultural studies degree. He discovered how thorough and versatile each course was here. "The fact that the history and international/global studies classes have specific topics is one thing I am really satisfied with," Kimura-Macke said. At his home university, he was used to studying his academic department at a much smaller level and was excited to dive deeper into subjects that interested him.

English student, Fleur York (who befriended Kimura-Macke through the exchange program) noticed the same things reflected in her academic life. Hailing from Sussex University, York was earning her degree in criminology because of her fascination with law enforcement and investigations. Coming to the U of A, she was immediately drawn to the different perspectives and methods.

"In England, criminology takes a more sociological and theoretical approach whereas this school has more practical classes like the criminal investigations course that I took last semester," York said.

For the international students here at the U of A, studying at an American university came with new opportunities and ideas that enhanced their education and understanding of the world.

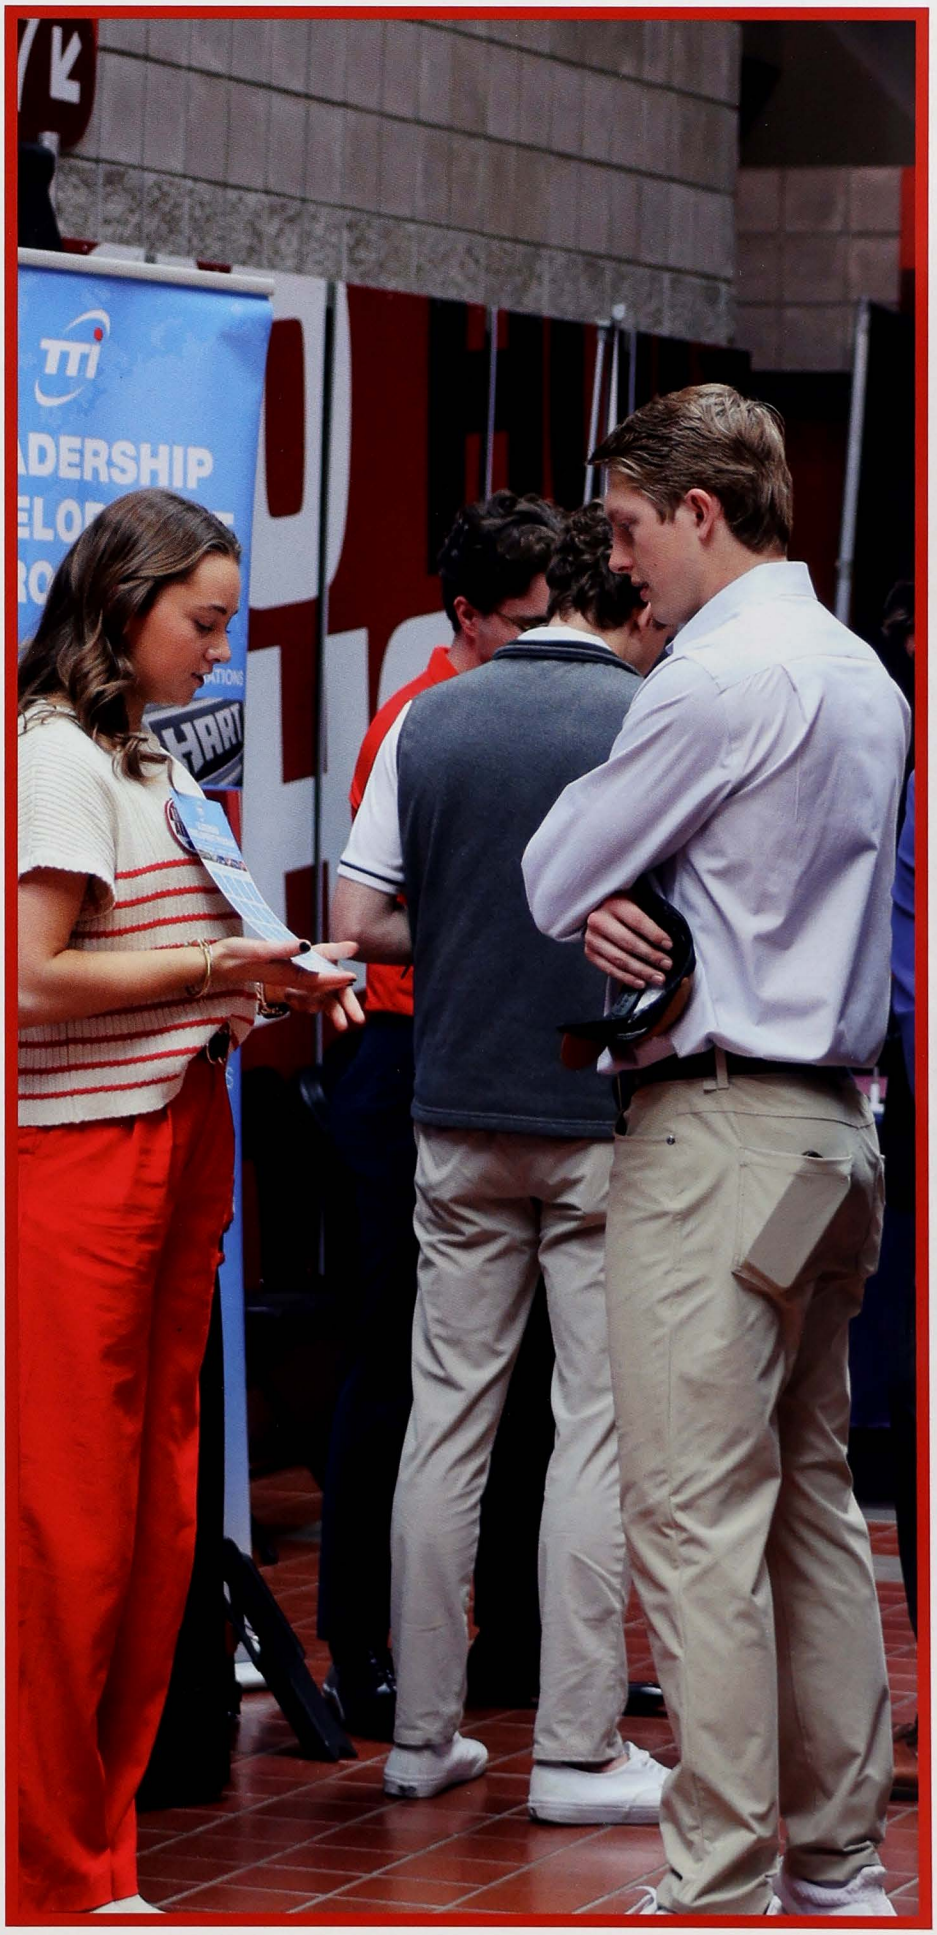
SAM M. WALTON
COLLEGE OF BUSINESS



BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Since its founding in 1926, the Walton College of Business has served as an environment where passionate students can excel and pave a pathway to a successful future. Although Walton is considered home to over 9,000 unique students, there is never a lack of friendliness, connection and opportunities. These connections have allowed students to become familiar with their peers and professors and have sparked creativity and innovation that will follow long after graduation.

Research and collaboration opportunities are far from rare within Walton. Students and professors frequently come together to share ideas that not only benefit the university, but also the community. Walton students have often expressed their gratitude for the experiences and knowledge that they have gained from these relationships.

Assistant teaching professor, Kim Petrone, highlighted that she is passionate about working with students. Within the walls of her business law classroom, she enjoys seeing students become fascinated with the content and is always excited about the chance to work with someone new. “It’s an opportunity to think creatively and try out ideas,” Petrone said.

Recently, Petrone has been able to do research with students in Arkansas courts. This has allowed students to take what they have learned in her class and apply it to real-world situations.

Sophomore finance student, Marielis Perez had the opportunity to do research alongside Petrone. Cubero-Perez credits Petrone in her new research and project within the McMillon Innovation Studio.

“I learned a lot during her research,” Cubero-Perez said, “It really helped me in my research that I have to do for my program now.” In her new research, she is partnering with Community Clinic NWA and developing a program that aids in postpartum care.

The Walton College of Business continuously prepares students for life outside of college. The relationships formed between students and professors in Walton prove that shared creativity will produce meaningful experiences that extend beyond the University of Arkansas itself.

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION AND HEALTH PROFESSIONS

COMMUNICATION SCIENCES

A leading center for the growth and development of future practitioners in the fields of education, health and human services, the College of Education and Health Professions (COEHP) offers a myriad of opportunities for its students to continue their mission of enhancing the quality of life for everyone. With 63 degree and certificate programs (offering 27 of those programs online), 21 research and service units, and 8 student organizations, COEHP ensures that its students have access to the resources and connections they require to thrive in their respective fields.

As Jessica M. Hicks, a junior communication sciences and disorders (CDIS) major, begins the process of writing her thesis, she often thanks her professors for their guidance. Previously a nursing major, Hicks discovered the CDIS program last year. To ease her transition into a new major, her professors made sure she felt welcomed.

"The professors also enjoy making connections with their students and often encourage us to talk with them outside of or after class."

Hicks emphasizes how COEHP plays an important role in volunteering and donating to organizations, since it's an integral part of the college's culture. "We are the ones most often volunteering with children with and without disabilities," Hicks said.

Maddie Cisneros, a sophomore who switched from exercise science to public health with a pre-occupational therapy track, appreciates COEHP's supportive outreach that has helped her in choosing a field she loves. She is grateful for how COEHP's emails are carefully curated for your specific needs. "I think that's what is really good about them is that they don't spam me. If something's really important or if it's something people would enjoy, they would make sure to inform you."

For both Hicks and Cisneros, COEHP is more than just the academic opportunities. It has given them a tight-knit community that will continue to support them well into their careers.

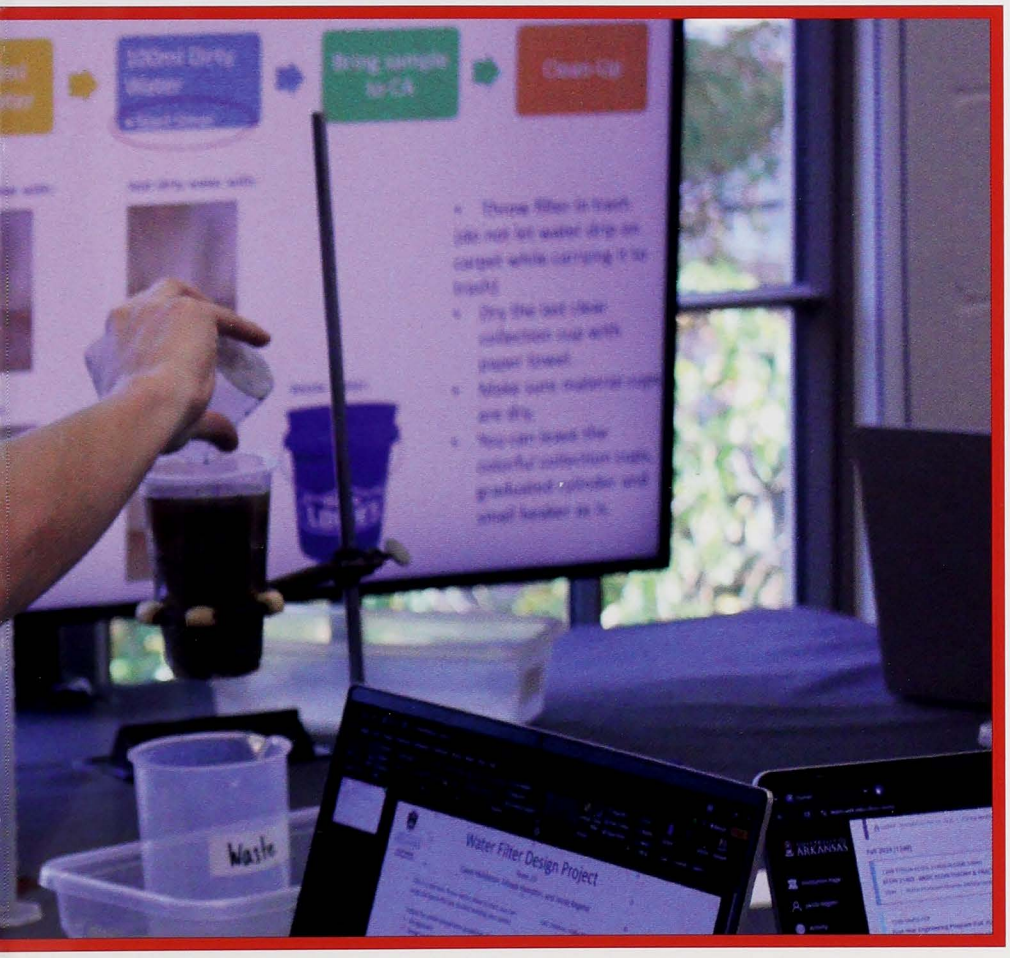
COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING



ENGINEERING POSSIBILITIES

The College of Engineering offers students a variety of options through its eight programs, each designed to align with a specific area of study. The college seeks to expand the science, technology, engineering, and mathematics workforce by providing them with the right tools to succeed.

Sophomore Kaleb Smith said the biological and agricultural engineering program was the perfect fit for his future goal of pursuing a career in renewable energy.

"I feel like the engineering program helps attract people to the campus," Smith said. "There are a lot of people that come here because of it, since overall, it is a good program, and it sets us up for success in our future careers."

He said he benefited from programs like the Engineering Career Awareness Program (ECAP), which helped him adjust to life on campus.

"I was able to meet with people who were also pursuing an engineering degree and build a community before the semester even started," Smith said.

Chemical engineering student Arrionna Stout said her field of study is challenging but also highly rewarding.

"One of the reasons I chose my program was because it was a male dominated field, and I want to show that women can do this too," Stout said. "The number of women attending has started to grow, just because we are actively trying to make that diversity level increase."

During her academic journey, Stout has learned that showing interest and getting involved are crucial to making progress. Working for ECAP has helped Stout maintain a balance between life and school responsibilities.

Go to office hours, get in touch with your professors, even if you don't have questions, go and introduce yourself," Stout said. "Ask them about their life because if they know you, they are more likely to bump your grade from an 89.5 to 90 and give you recommendation letters."

Rush ARKANSAS

A FRESH START TO GREEK LIFE

August 17 marked the beginning of new lifelong friendships and experiences as the Chi Omega Greek Theater filled with sorority recruits, or potential new members. Screams of excitement rippled through the air as the girls ripped open their bid envelopes to see which sorority they would now call home.

For freshman Grace Replogle, one of the newest members of Delta Gamma, the arrival of bid day came with a mix of anxiety and excitement.

"I knew what chapter I found my home in and I was nervous that I would not see their name on the card. I was reassured by everyone around me that everything happens for a reason and it did," Replogle said.

The process leading up to bid day can be challenging, as the girls must tour, interview, and select their favorite houses as rush week progresses. In the past 20 years, the number of Greek life members has more than tripled in correlation to the ever-increasing student body population here at the University of Arkansas.

As a result, the recruitment process has begun to be increasingly more competitive as the years have progressed. With nearly 30% of the student body participating in Greek life, membership at one of the Panhellenic chapters offers its members the unique opportunity to connect with each other.

This year, the sorority recruitment process looked slightly different from previous years, as a new sorority chapter was added to the university's roster. Their fellow Panhellenic chapters warmly welcomed Alpha Phi as they showed up to support them on their bid day on Sept. 8.

For freshman Clara Lawson, she said the chance to join a new sorority was too good to pass up.

"I didn't initially want to join a sorority, but after trying out the recruitment process and meeting some of the girls, I saw how Alpha Phi has fostered a community for others and how I could be a part of that too," Lawson shared.

The once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to be a founding member of a new sorority and the chance to work towards strengthening its foundation resulted in the addition of many new members, making Alpha Phi's recruitment a success.

RIDING THE ROLLERCOASTER

As one of the largest county fairs in the state, the Washington County Fair is a popular tradition in Northwest Arkansas. The fair is a four-day event filled with performances, rides, food and daily deals.

It ran from Aug. 20-24. Sophomore Mark Livingston attended the fair as a way to engage in a fun time with his friends."We rode rides and saw the animals," Livingston said. "The lines for the rides were so long and we would stay in lines for about 20-30 minutes for a ride."

Livingston said he did not get on a lot of rides because he has motion sickness. He preferred to either stay on the side or take pictures and videos of his friends on the rides.

"I went to the Fire Ball first because I knew I would get motion sickness," Livingston said. "Halfway through the ride, I was like 'oh boy, I'm glad I didn't eat anything.'"

An attraction he enjoyed was the petting zoo. Livingston said he used to live on a farm and his family used to have goats so seeing the goats at the zoo was nostalgic.

"I didn't realize how many animals they had with goats, pigs, cows and sheep," Livingston said.

One of Livingston's friends, freshman Athena Guzman, decided to attend the fair because it was "a treat after a week of academics and trying to balance being an adult."

"The fair is actually really fun," Guzman said. "I had just recently moved to Fayetteville at that point, so it felt like a really great way to kind of integrate myself into the college culture."

Guzman rode the rides that went up high even though she had a fear of heights. She said she felt like puking a bunch of times, but she still had fun because she was there for the "experiences and enjoyment of being with friends."

"I was like 'I am in college, I'm a big girl now, so let's not close my eyes,'" Guzman said. "I kept my eyes open and it was kind of fun even if I thought I was going to die at the top of Fire Ball."

Since Livingston and Guzman had an odd amount of people in their group, Guzman said she "decided to be the sacrifice" and be seated next to a stranger. She said meeting the stranger was the most interesting part of the night because it was so memorable for her. The fair was one of the first decisions Guzman said she made on her own in college.

She said she believed that one of the positives about being a college student is the ability to make plans and enjoy things outside of school with friends without having to worry about curfews or parents.

"You're your own person and you get to do what you want," Guzman said. "If I want to spend $30 by going to a county fair with long lines, I'm able to do that and I'm having fun with my friends."

"THE UNIVERSITY OF ARKANSAS IS MY HOME. I COULDN'T IMAGINE MYSELF ANYWHERE ELSE."
- Madalyn Menke, junior

With an enrollment of 32,140 students, including 27,472 undergraduates and 4,272 graduate students, the University of Arkansas campus is bustling with energy and diversity, making it a vibrant place for everyone. For many students, the journey of making U of A feel like home begins with friendships and building community.

Freshman Kadyn Grisso from Tulsa, Oklahoma, emphasizes the abundance of opportunities to connect.

"U of A gives so many chances for you to make friends—it's hard not to," Grisso said.

Whether through the 380 registered student organizations—ranging from cultural to professional to special interest groups—or the 34 fraternities and sororities that collectively boast 6,800 members, students have ample avenues to meet peers who share their interests and values. For students like Grisso, the beautiful surroundings of Fayetteville offer a peaceful retreat.

"I love going outside and to Lake Fayetteville when the weather isn't too hot," Grisso said. "It reminds me of home and gives me a peaceful escape when things get overwhelming."

U of A is currently home to a diverse student body, with 17,212 out-of-state students, 1,241 international students, even a few students from Puerto Rico and military postings. This blend of cultures and backgrounds can enrich the campus community and foster an inclusive environment where everyone can find their place.

In the heart of the Ozarks, the University of Arkansas stands as a testament to community, support, and personal growth. The supportive faculty at U of A also plays a pivotal role in helping students feel at home. With a student-to-faculty ratio of 19:1, professors are accessible and invested in their students' success.Many students find that their relationships with faculty extend beyond the classroom, creating a nurturing academic environment.

With 103 undergraduate majors, 95 graduate programs, 36 doctoral and specialist programs and various certificate options, U of A offers pathways for every academic interest. Students can explore their passions and find their niche and further enhance their sense of belonging.

QUICK REVAMP

LONG OVERDUE

With blueprints unfolding, the University of Arkansas campus underwent impactful construction that aims to enhance academic resources and create inviting communal spaces. The university undertook three construction projects throughout the 2024-2025 academic school year: Mullins Library, Institute for Integrative and Innovation Research, and Anthony Timberlands Center for Design and Materials Innovation.

Drew Watzke, a representative of facilities management, expresses gratitude for his opportunity to help the university's facilities department receive recognition for their dedication and hardwork. "Our facilities management department does a phenomenal job in getting these structures built," said Watzke. "A lot of them are very difficult projects that take years to plan, find the funding and actually execute."

Situated at the heart of campus, Mullins Library serves as the university's academic center and is undergoing construction that originally began in 2018. The renewal of Mullins consists of two phases. Each phase targets specific levels of the building to ensure that students and faculty can still access library resources throughout the construction process.

The first phase of Mullins Library included renovations to the third and fourth floors which reopened August 2021. The second phase of Mullins Library focused on the first and second levels, mimicking the style and design of the first phase renovations.These additions include a virtual reality lab, data visualization space, event space, a café, makerspace and a recording studio suite.

"I am so excited for the addition of the café. I think it will add more character to the building and offer time for a quick study break or to catch up with friends between classes," said senior Bentlee Robinson. "I will admit that I am a little sad to see my secret basement study spot go away, but I know that space could be used more effectively."

Watzke said that Chancellor Robinson has honed in on student success and research excellence this year, which are areas affected by these new structures.

"[Chancellor Robinson] believes every structure placed on campus goes back to students in a positive way." Watzke said.

As the new school year begins, students encounter the seemingly never-ending renovations around campus. With the renovations at Mullins Library, the Fine Arts building, the new Nanotech Building as well as other various projects students are met with minor inconveniences when walking on campus for classes.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME

FAMILY WEEKEND

On Friday, Sept. 13th, parents and families were welcomed to campus, marking the beginning of a weekend full of bonding, connection and school spirit. Students exuded excitement as they strolled familiar paths with familiar people and parents jumped at every photo-op to document important moments and places. The campus was filled with love and good energy as families were reunited.

Freshman Charlotte Johnson was especially excited for family weekend because of her strong ties to Fayetteville. Although she's originally from Little Rock, a lot of her extended family lives in Fayetteville and her parents are both University of Arkansas alumni who have maintained a connection to the university.

"It's so cool to go where they went to school," Johnson said. "It's part of why I chose Fayetteville. I just grew up being excited to come to Fayetteville because they were. It's always felt like home to me."

Sophie Rector, a freshman from Southlake, Texas was just as grateful to be reunited with her family, even without prior connections to the school. Her hometown is about 5 hours away, and her parents made the trek to see campus for the first time since move-in.

"I've been looking forward to [family weekend] since I got here," Rector said. "I was really excited to show them where my classes are and what I've been up to. I liked showing them the Greek theater. I just really love that area and I spend a lot of time over there. That's where the pep rally was too, so I actually got to go to an event with them which was fun."

The U of A hosted a variety of events, including the pep rally the night before the game, a casino themed Cardinal Nights event and a family weekend tailgate party.

Students and families also participated in events beyond those hosted by the university exclusively for parents weekend. From student-led tours of the campus to exploring the Fayetteville Farmers Market, students and their families were entertained all weekend. Johnson and her parents went to a cookout hosted by her sorority, as it was their Dad's Weekend.

The experience was even more special because her mom was in the same sorority and visiting the house brought back memories.

"They were telling stories about their experiences there and getting to see them light up while walking into the house was really cool," Johnson said.

Sophomore Elise Hankins took a different approach to family weekend, inviting a childhood friend to join her as her parents came and visited her last year. Hankins chose a more self-guided weekend, taking her friend around campus and around Dickson. The most eventful experience was tailgating, as it was both of the girls' first times.

"It was really fun because there was so much going on," Hankins said. "I'd always seen it from afar but had never been. It was so busy and everyone was just excited to be there."

Whether they were playing games, exploring campus, or cheering on the Razorbacks, families were ecstatic to be reunited and have an opportunity to spend some quality time with the people that matter most.

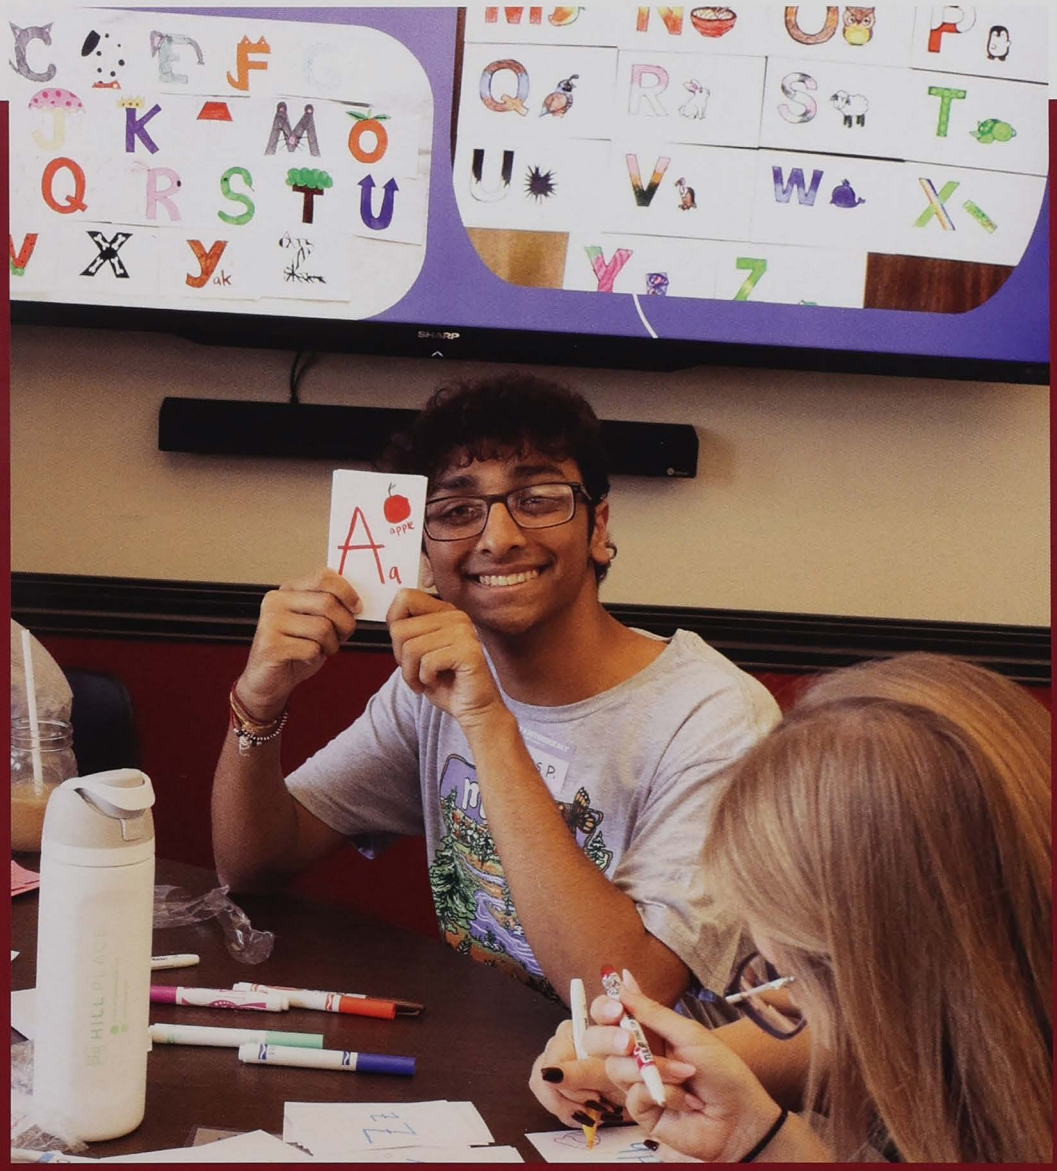
MAKING A DIFFERENCE



GIVING BACK

Make a Difference Day is the largest day dedicated to community service in Northwest Arkansas. In 2023, 400 volunteers generated over $35,000 in economic impact and served over 1,000 hours in just one day.

Volunteers were given a variety of projects to choose from, ranging from trail clean ups to gardening and even to serving with the J.B. Gearhart food pantry.

Make a Difference Day 2024 occurred Saturday, Sept. 21, beginning at 8 a.m. at the University of Arkansas Student Union with a kickoff and distribution of free breakfast and t-shirts. After that, students joined their respective volunteer groups to begin serving the community.

Nova Kohl, a freshman accounting major from Fayetteville, served as a Student Engagement Ambassador for the Volunteer Action Center, where she assisted the executive board. At Make A Difference Day this year, she volunteered at Potter's House, which is a thrift store in Fayetteville. The Potter's House donation sort was the biggest event at Make a Difference Day 2024.

"There were three shifts and I was working the first two," Kohl said. "Each one had a little less than 50 people." Kohl and other students sorted through the store's warehouse and separated the non-clothing items. Despite the large task ahead of the volunteers, she said that it was an enjoyable experience and she even got to meet new people. "It was definitely a lively, friendly atmosphere," Kohl said. "I was talking to people whose names I did not even know." She plans to participate in Make a Difference Day in the future. "There were a lot of really good opportunities for Make a Difference Day," Kohl said. "It is just a really cool way to have fun and give back."

Kohl said that volunteering allows her to better connect with the community. "I made new connections with other students," Kohl said. "It's a really good environment for everybody to come together no matter their background to unite for a common goal." "It makes you feel good about yourself, but it also makes an impact in the community," she said. Kohl said that about 700 volunteers came together for Make a Difference Day 2024. She said she encourages more people to participate in Make a Difference Day in the future because "the more the better."

150 YEARS OF HARMONY

LEAD THE MUSIC

Known for being one of the oldest collegiate bands in the nation, the University of Arkansas Marching Band turned 150 years old in 2024. The musical ensemble originally started in 1874 as a part of the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) but later developed into the band that is known today.

This school year's head drum major was Juan Ramos, a senior majoring in music education with a focus on instrumental education. He was the only returning drum major and he said he believes it was an honor to lead the 150th year of the band.

"There aren't that many who are as old as we are," Ramos said. "Think of Ohio State.They're super famous, but they're not as old as we are. Mizzou is going on band 139 and we're band 150."

Ramos said the Razorback band's motto this year was tradition, passion and excellence. He said those qualities "have always been pillars" in the marching band's existence.

"It's an honor because people like me are not normally in positions like this," Ramos said. "Marching band is not normally for people who are of Hispanic origin, let alone being the guy at the front. It's special to me because this is my dream come true but on a bigger level. I represent something to a group of people now."

"We're talking about 350 people and only four people get to be drum majors. Being the leader for maybe one of the most important years in our band's existence is humbling and beautifully scary," Ramos said.

Ramos said he loved every second of being the head drum major because he believed he was fortunate enough to be born at the right time to be with a group of people he thinks is one of the best, if not the best, marching band he had seen in a long time.

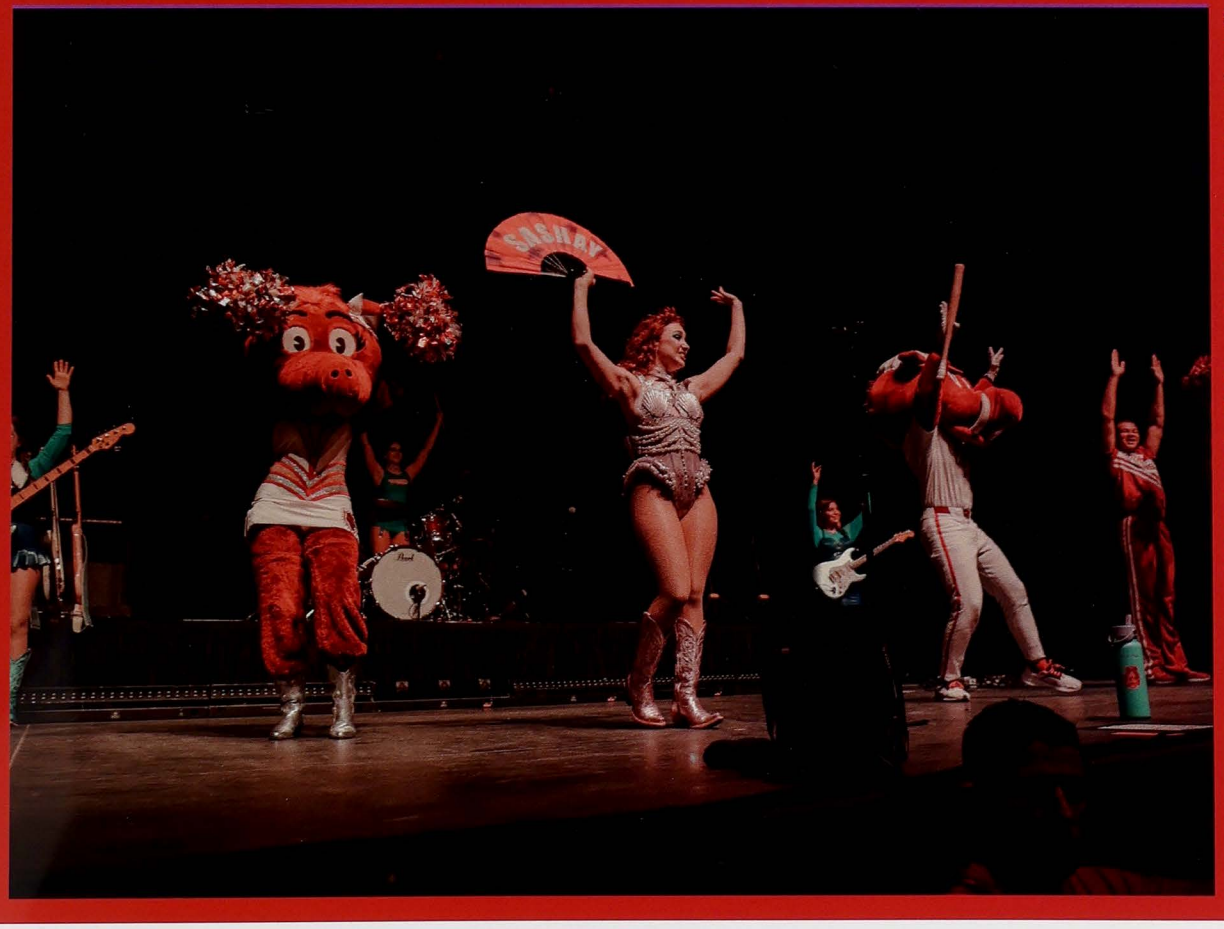
CHAPPELL & THOSE HOGS



HOGS TO GO

On October 2nd, the 11,000 capacity Walmart Amphitheatre hosted singer and performer Chappell Roan for her Arkansan run of The Midwest Princess Tour, attracting a lively audience full of University of Arkansas' students.

Abbie Ahlbridt, a freshman graphic design major, shared her excitement for the performer who claimed the night her "hometown" show.

"It is so liberating to have such a loud and queer artist here in Arkansas," Ahlbridt said. "Chappell Roan is showing up for all of us that can't, and isn't afraid of anyone."

The performance featured many memorable moments that catered to U of A students, including when she brought out members of the Razorback Spirit Squads, Cheerleading and Dance Teams, to "call the hogs."

"The entire performance was amazing, but the highlight for me was when she called and brought out the hogs," freshman International and Global Studies student Aya Alzufari said. "It really showed how she really cares about her performances and the local traditions in the town she's performing in. "

Alzufari also noted the significance of Roan's performance for communities on campus.

"Chappell Roan performing in a conservative state like Arkansas provides hope for LGBTQ+ youth," Alzufari said. "Though I'm not a part of the community, I'm really glad that she's still upholding her morals and roots as well as inspiring others which I admire a lot."

The performance highlighted how the Walmart Amphitheatre can foster an artists' ability to create connections with various communities around the U of A. Chappell Roan's concert displayed representation in the arts that other artist can continue for students to view when they perform there.

CAMPUS CANINES

A STUDENT'S BEST FRIEND

The K-9 unit at the University of Arkansas consisted of four amazing dogs, each of which bring their own unique set of skills to the team. The police dog unit was supervised by Sergeant Jeffrey D. Shetlar who handles K-9 Kane. There are four total in the unit: K-9 Kane, K-9 Charlie, K-9 Stella and K-9 Rickie.

"The K-9s are kind of a force multiplier, so they help us do our jobs," said Sgt. Shetlar. "They are either helping detect explosives or narcotics."

The dogs don't just serve that purpose, "They also help us reach out to the students. I mean, they're friendly… you may see me in the union and if a person just saw me, they wouldn't approach me. They'll approach me if I have the dog to see if they can pet the dog and then they may ask a question that they were just dying to ask." Sgt. Shetlar said.

As an additional resource to college students, police dogs add an additional sense of comfort and familiarity. One highlight is bringing the dogs up during stressful moments, like exam weeks to offer free cuddles.

K-9 Rickie has a very serious job, considering he "is the only dog in the state certified in detecting Fentanyl." Because of this, "he is pretty much exclusively used by the DEA now." Sgt. Shetlar said.

Sgt. Shetlar believes that the most rewarding part of working with these dogs is "seeing the smile on people's faces." Luckily, U of A's recent ensured safety allows him to focus those three dogs' energy on the students. Everyone can benefit from a hug from a furry friend.

Razorback fans take on tailgates for the annual Homecoming celebration.

HOGS TAKE ON HOMECOMING

Homecoming 2024 at the University of Arkansas brought together students, alumni and the Razorback community for a week of tradition, pride and celebration.

The Associated Student Government (ASG) and the Student Alumni Association co-host the U of A Homecoming. This year, ASG Vice President Aleesa Williams was responsible for planning and overseeing the event.

Planning for homecoming is no small feat. Williams said the process typically begins during the last week of May and develops up until Homecoming Day.

During Homecoming week an event occurred each day. Some of these events ranged from a concert at the Greek Theatre to a pep-rally before the annual football game.

“My favorite homecoming tradition is the Chancellor’s Ball, because it brings all students together,” Williams said. “It’s a big event where everyone gets to dress up, enjoy themselves and celebrate the U of A and our school spirit.”

Williams said 169 candidates were nominated by their registered student organization or Greek organization.

Trayvius Brown and Sydney Roulhac were first crowned king and queen at the Chancellors’ ball, that took place a few nights before the big game. Then honored again during halftime of the football game.

Roulhac graduated from a small high school in White Hall, Arkansas, alongside less than 200 students. While she was prom queen, she was never nominated for homecoming court.

“Having this experience of being on court for the first time and then actually winning was a special moment for me,” Roulhac said.

Roulhac boasts of the U of A in its multiple opportunities for student involvement, encouraging all students to find peers with similar mindsets to further challenge themselves.

“Getting involved is really important,” Roulhac said, “ [it] makes you want to give back to our university to make sure it’s the best place that it can be for years to come.”

COMING HOME.

Razorback Football team emerges through the gates to take on the LSU Tigers for the Homecoming game on Oct. 19.

FALL IN FAY.

THE HEART OF FALL

Fayetteville, Arkansas – It's fall at the University of Arkansas – a time when pumpkin spice hits the campus Starbucks and midterms loom on the horizon. Students share their favorite things about autumn on the hill.

Rylie Gebhart, a senior sports management major, marvels at the vibrant colors that mark the trees across campus, capturing the essence of fall in the Ozarks. Although she has lived in Fayetteville her whole life, the change in season never gets old for her.

"When the leaves on the trees change colors, it's just so beautiful over campus," Gebhart said. "You can also see a beautiful view of the trees from Mount Sequoyah."

For many students, the season's cool yet comfortable weather is a welcome relief. The struggle of walking to class on a hilly campus in the summer heat is an experience shared by most students during the start of the semester.

William Vint, a campus bookstore employee, appreciates the refreshing change in temperature.

"The thing I like about the fall here is the weather changing and getting a little bit cooler outside but not too cold," Vint said. "Football also comes along with the fall time… Woo Pig."

Vint said he has always been a football fanatic, specifically for the NFL, but did not pay much attention to college football until arriving on campus. He now associates the fall season with Razorback football and looks forward to the tailgates at each home game.

Junior Cara Cox views campus during the autumn months as a fashion runway. Cox said that she believes fall fashion is superior to other seasons' fashion because layering various pieces can be different and fun.

"I enjoy being able to wear beanies and cute coats while walking to class because the weather is nice and crisp," Cox said. "I'm a nanny in the summer, so all I really get to wear is basic athletic clothing."

Cox also said that fall in Fayetteville makes campus feel homier.

Whether it is cheering on the Hogs, switching to a fall wardrobe, or exploring Fayetteville's fall foliage, autumn brings a special feeling to campus.

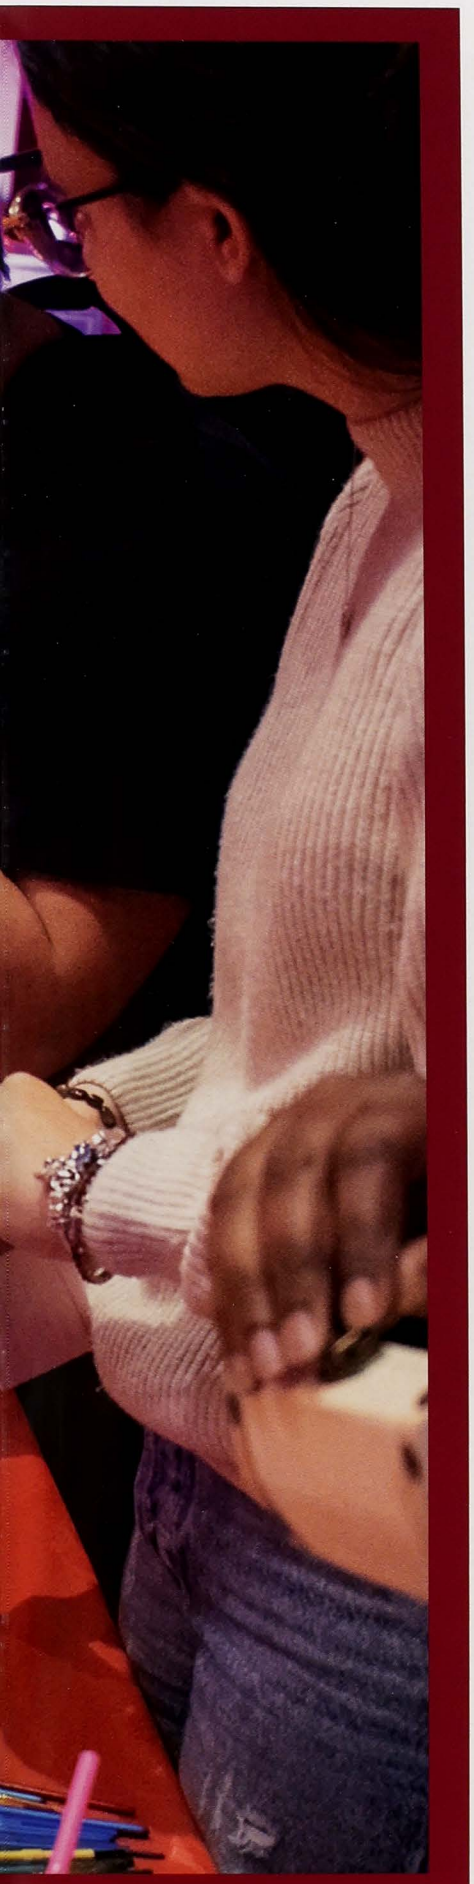
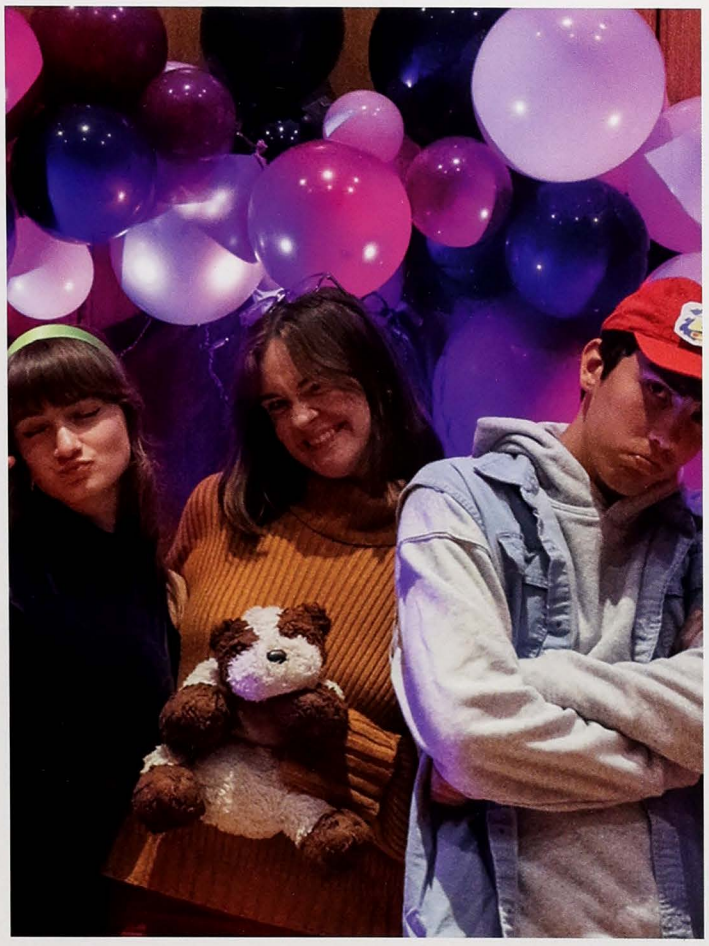
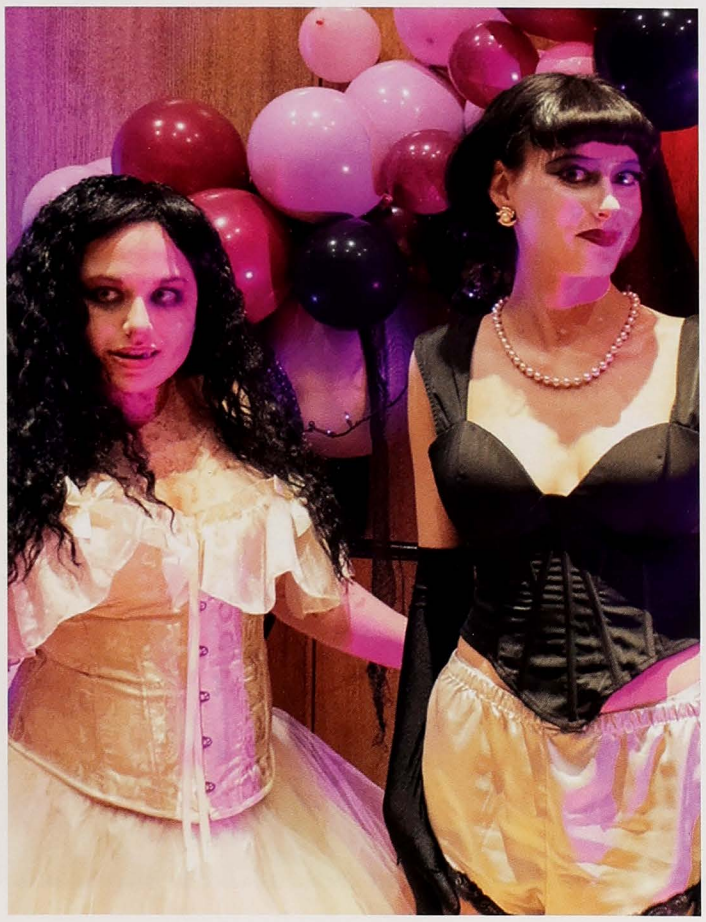
HALLOWEEN







TRICKS,TREATS, WITH SOME SHRIEKS

This Halloween, the University of Arkansas students embraced the spooky season with an unforgettable event, Hell on the Hill. On Tuesday, Oct. 22, the festivities took over campus, centered around Reid, Hotz and Pomfret Residence Halls.

The night kicked off with the Haunted House in Reid Hall, transformed into a labyrinth of creepy corridors and surprises put together by staff and the resident assistants. Freshman mechanical engineering student Matt Anderson said, “There were some really great actors and so many twists and turns.”

Sophomore marketing student and Reid Hall Resident Assistant Ashlynn Watson was one of the horror actors.

“We had a vision to turn the kitchen into a horrific hospital room with the use of bloody sheets, horrifying hospital records, several severed body parts and even lots of giant needles,” Watson said. “It took a lot of work but seeing the pleasant fear on everyone’s faces made it all worth it.”

Pomfret followed suit with its Tunnel of Terror where they encouraged students to “venture inside where shadows come alive.”

As the terror of the Haunted House concluded, the fun continued with an afterparty at Hotz Hall. This party featured food, games, a costume contest and themed music. Students came dressed in their most creative costumes including classic monsters, Harry Potter characters and pop culture icons.

Hell on the Hill brought the U of A campus together for a one-of-a-kind Halloween celebration driven by the RAs creativity, hard work and commitment to being spooky.

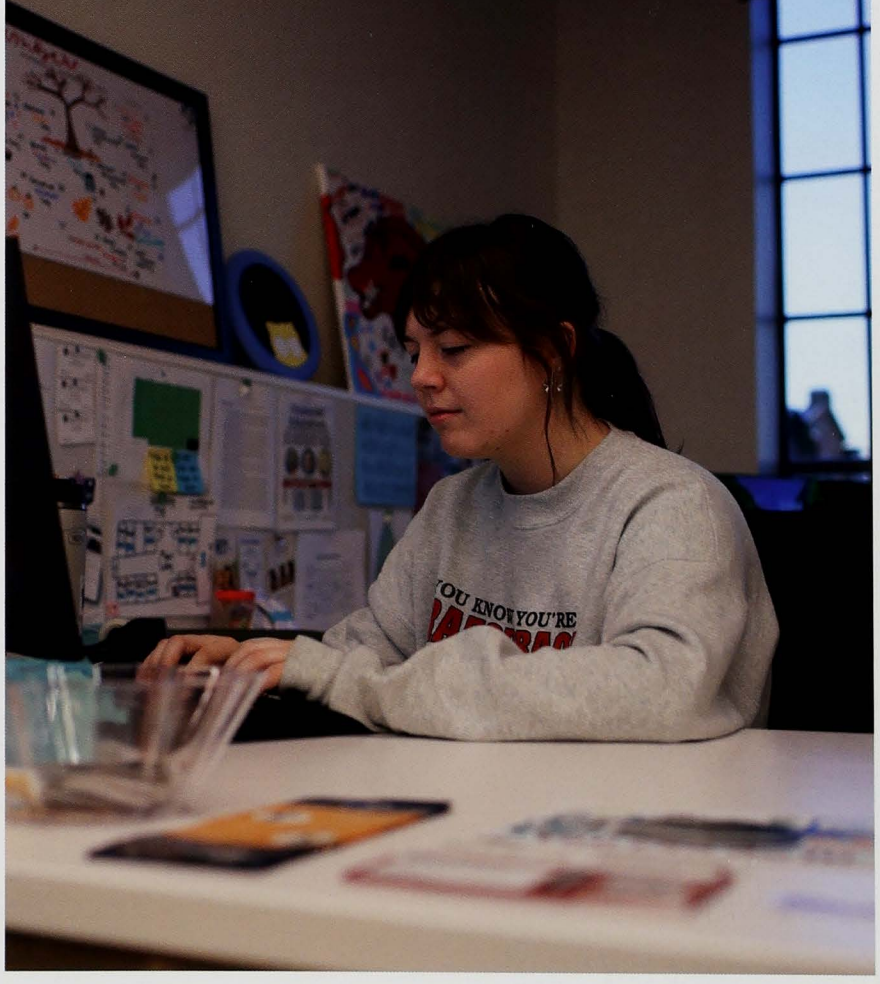
STUDENTS AT WORK



WORK CLOSE TO HOME

The University of Arkansas offers a variety of on-campus jobs for students in different departments from food and drinks to housing. There are opportunities for our young adults to balance their academic studies, life and work, in a reasonable manner.

Logan Mann, a sociology graduate student, is a current Hill Coffee employee and graduate assistant. He not only brews coffee and tea on campus, but helps professors grade assignments and participate in research.

Mann said he believed it is good that students have access to work on campus because of the scheduling flexibility and respect from managers. He recounted his previous off-campus jobs about how people might not understand or respect a student's workload.

"If you're a student that is looking for a job, always look on campus first because I've had jobs off-campus, but working on campus is great because everything feels manageable," Mann said.

Jacob Shepherd, a junior majoring in biology, is currently working as a university housing resident assistant (RA). He said there are vast roles as a RA.

"We have duty, which is every night," Shepherd said. "We also have to work desk and give out packages or rent out equipment."

RAs have many terminologies, so Shepherd said there is a disconnection between the RAs and their residents because of the lack of explanations.

"It's disheartening when you hear stuff that can be avoided because I'm trying to involved as many people as possible," Shepherd said."Involvement means understanding what I do, understanding what you do and feeling comfortable to be in GroupMe and say what you want to say." He said if someone has doors that have been closed in their face because of their identity, it can be scary to think about working student jobs.

"The reality is getting a job on campus, related to campus like an RA, can actually really acclimate you to campus and get those doors open to you that were unfairly closed," Shepherd said.

He said he would not have felt a fraction of what he feels about the campus if he did not have a student job.

"When you get a job on campus, you realize there are things for you and you can be safe and you can be who you are," Shepherd said. "You can find a way to get to those places that other people are being given and you're just as deserving."

USE YOUR VOICE

THE ELECTION ON CAMPUS

In fall 2024, the Presidential election sparked lively debate all across the University of Arkansas campus,especially within the Democracy Fellows, a non-partisan club dedicated to increasing voter turnout and awareness. The club's goal is to educate students about the importance of voting, both at the national and local level.

Anna Abston, Secretary of Democracy Fellows, emphasized the importance of student involvement.

"I think it's really important for students because a lot of students aren't involved on your college campus. We've also seen a decline in voter turnout recently and democracy fellows is really trying to just promote civic engagement," Abston said.

College students tend to be incredibly politically aware, but they remain one of the least likely demographics to vote.

"That's why Democracy Fellows is so vital. We are working to make the University of Arkansas a more voter friendly campus for students to know their rights and resources," Abston said.

The entire nation paused for election night, anxiously awaiting the results. There were several very surprising results, including the fall of the blue wall, which entails several northeastern states that generally vote blue, but flipped red this year. Many key swing states shifted in unexpected directions as the tallies were taken. Organizations and clubs on campus hosted election watch parties and students gathered all over to watch the results.

In the end, Donald Trump was named the 47th President of the United States. This election showed that University of Arkansas students realized how important their involvement is in democracy.

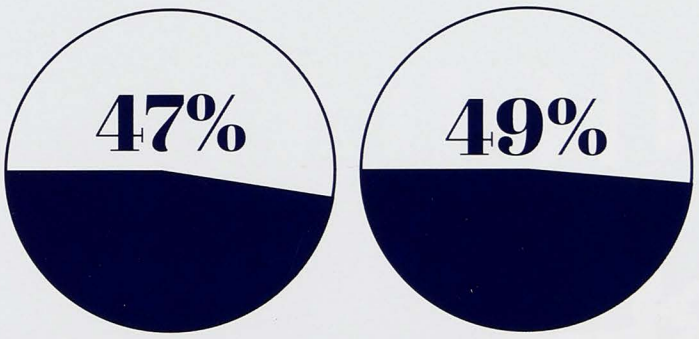
CLOSE RACE THAT FLIPS THE SCRIPT

Experience Fayetteville CEO, Molly Rawn and 20-year serving Mayor of Fayetteville went head-to-head in the race for the title of "Mayor of Fayetteville."

The seat of Mayor served as the Chief Executive Officer for the City of Fayetteville. During one's service as mayor, it is their responsibility to ensure the enforcement of city policies, ordinances, administrative rules, and implementation of state laws, as well as directly oversee city offices and employees to discharge their duties.

During Jordan's tenure as Mayor, he sought out and implemented 10 master plans, designed to help guide future growth economically, improve infrastructure, and to maintain Fayetteville citizens' quality of life. For his campaign - Jordan promised to maintain his previous work as mayor, and to continue to ensure Fayetteville remained a Top 10 city to live.



EXPERIENCE YOU CAN TRUST.

RE-ELECT LIONELD JORDAN

A LOCAL INSIGHT

Despite not serving for 20-years as Mayor, Molly Rawn was no stranger to local-politics. Her campaign focused on implementing a "Housing First" mentality to help cushion the housing crisis in Northwest Arkansas, it also focused to elevate support for small businesses within Fayetteville from establishment until it's up and running, and it also promised to increase transparency within the community.

After the November 5th election, the race for Mayor as well as four other local positions are turned into a runoff. With Jordan recieving the initial 47% popular vote, and Rawn recieving 37% the race for Mayor continues.

In the Dec. 3 runoff election, Mayor Lioneld Jordan was defeated for the first time in 20 years amid close election results against Molly Rawn. With Rawn taking the 51% popular vote, she was named the 2024, Fayetteville Mayoral Elect.

CORD RESOURCES

MORE THAN JUST ADVISING

The Cordia Harrington Center for Excellence (CORD), named after successful entrepreneur and U of A alumna, is located near Old Main lawn and serves as the new student success center.

Upon entering the front doors, a large, circular help desk greets guests. Help desk jobs are typically occupied by students who are eager to assist in whatever way possible.

Ali Tejani, senior broadcast journalism major, has worked as a student success center guide at the CORD for a year. In his role, he checks students into their advising appointments and answers all questions about classes, advising, tutoring or anything else university related.

Tejani said the best thing about working at the CORD is that they are very flexible with student employees' hours, working around classes and extracurricular activities.

"The biggest benefit for me is not having to commute somewhere else when I already spend the vast majority of my day on campus," Tejani said.

The CORD is home to many university departments, such as the career studio, career education, Fulbright and CoEHP advising, U of A Cares and more. Within the career departments, students can find the writing studio, resume building, mock interviews and tutoring. Advising appointments are typically by appointment, but walk-ins are offered throughout each semester.

Tejani said that tutoring and academic coaching is the most overlooked resource offered at the CORD.

Tutoring offers one-on-one, small-group, and large-group assistance in courses across campus, according to the student success website. One-on-one appointments can be in-person or online on Zoom. All tutor-led study group sessions are in-person only.

On the ground level, students can find a few dining options at the Drove and Starbucks. The word "drove" means a group of hogs driven together, a phrase that matches our Razorbacks fittingly, according to the university. The Drove serves smoothie bowls and quesadillas. Students can use a meal swipe from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday, grabbing fuel between classes. Indoor and outdoor seating is available.

The CORD is known for its architecture, with many beautiful elements. Tejani said his favorite part about the building is the glass skylight over the help desk, where he gets to sit at each shift.

FROM TRUCK TO TABLE

HOGS GOTTA EAT

On Dickson Street, food trucks have become not just a dining choice, but a vibrant part of campus culture. KDK's Chicken and Waffles and Yancey's Dickson Street Dogs arguably take the top favorite spots amongst students. It is evident that both Keith Kidd, owner of KDK's, and Cody Yancey, owner of Yancey's, hold a special place in their hearts for the university and its students.

Kidd, former Arkansas Razorback wide receiver, takes pride in the fact that his food truck serves fresh chicken to its customers, unlike most surrounding fast food restaurants who serve frozen chicken.

KDK's is best known for its chicken and waffles, with the option of various combinations.

The basic combo costs $9 and consists of three fried chicken tenders, one waffle and one side. Other menu items include wings, fries, loaded waffle fries, boudin balls and mac and cheese.

"What we have is really unique," said Kidd, 62. "When you got good food, people want to be together to share it."

KDK's food truck can generally be found in the parking lot of the Campus Bookstore on Dickson from Thursday through Saturday nights, operating from 9 p.m. until around 3 a.m. Although, plans are underway for a new daytime location off of Martin Luther King Blvd.

Kidd said he grew up on southern comfort food in southeastern Arkansas. While attending the U of A in the 80s, Kidd noticed there were not many restaurants that catered toward this hunkering which inspired the opening of KDK's.

Yancey's is another hotspot for a late night snack, known for its hotdogs. With six topping combinations and the option for customization, each hotdog costs around $5.

Yancey's operates at two locations off Dickson: a permanent container beside Yeehawg and a cart adjacent to the train on West Ave. Both spots are typically open Thursday through Saturday nights from 9 p.m. to 3 a.m.

Beyond its famous dogs, Yancey's serves as a safe place on Dickson Street. Yancey, U of A alum and Army veteran, invites students to visit his food truck if they ever feel unsafe. He offers assistance in arranging safe rides home and keeps extra phone chargers on hand.

LIGHTS ON THE SQUARE

FINALS FESTIVITIES

Lights of the Ozarks celebrated the holiday season with an elaborate light show from November 22 until the end of December at Fayetteville's Historic Downtown Square. Certain nights featured special events such as the lighting ceremony, closing ceremony and the parade. Over 500,000 LED lights were used to create the show that lit up the town every night from 5p.m. to 1a.m. Madelyn Abraham, a junior from Madison, Mississippi, has made a tradition of visiting the opening event.

"My freshman year, one of my good friends told me about it, and I have gone every year since to see the lighting of the square," Abraham said. She added that she enjoys going with friends.

Local food trucks and vendors brought food and other items to the event. It also featured live music. The celebration was free to attend, and people of all ages were represented. This past year marked the 30th year of this holiday experience.

"I feel like it's more of a local thing," Abraham said. "If one of my friends was not from here, I probably would not have known about it as soon as I did."

Abraham said that this celebration reminded her of one she attended near her hometown. She said that it's a fun thing to do around the end of the semester when final exams are coming up. Christmas is one of her favorite holidays, so it has provided a fun way for her to begin celebrating the season alongside her friends.

"It's a fun thing to do outside of school that involves all of the community," Abraham said. "It gets you in the Christmas spirit."

Abraham said she definitely plans to continue visiting the lighting ceremony in the future.

WINTER WEATHER

SNOW DAYS AHEAD

The University of Arkansas kicked off the spring semester with 7 inches of snow that blanketed the campus on Jan. 9. The heavy snowfall led to the delay of winter session classes, giving students a surprise “snow day.”

Winter-session students as well as those returning from break for the spring semester embraced the frosty conditions, seizing the opportunity to have some fun before returning to their studies.

Many like Kendall Fisher and Morgan Murphy took to the hills, making snow angels and crafting their own “snowhogs”, a tribute to the Razorback mascot. Fisher said this is her “favorite snow day memory.”

Others, such as Sydney Hammon from Conway, Arkansas, grabbed their sleds, skis and snowballs to join in the fun. “I went skiing for the first time and had fun with snowball fights, sledding, and making snow angels,” Hammond said. “It was a great break and so much fun!”

The rare occurrence of a snow day in the middle of the academic year gave the Razorback community a moment of joy and camaraderie before the semester’s work began.

“My favorite snow day activity was walking down Dickson Street in the snow with my friends,” said Tristan Poston, a student from Memphis, Tennessee.

While the snow day was a temporary escape, it served as a reminder of the unpredictable nature of winter and the joy of getting to experience all four seasons here in Arkansas.

As students continue their degrees, they can look back on the U of A’s unique winter wonderland with childlike joy and a Razorback spirit.

TIK-TOK FACES U.S. BAN

TO BAN OR NOT TO BAN

On January 19, 2025, TikTok was temporarily banned in the U.S. due to concerns over national security and data privacy, specifically in relation to the Chinese government. While the app was only banned for around 12 hours, concerns were raised about media suppression and censorship.

The School of Journalism and Strategic Media's Exemplary Executive in Residence Stephen Narisi believes that social media is a crucial part of journalism in today's age of technology.

"There are a lot of people, journalists who use TikTok as they do Facebook, as they do Instagram, et cetera, et cetera, because it's a way to communicate with their audience," Narisi said. "They're not exactly social influencers, but they have followers and that's a two-way conversation because if you put some information out there, you may get some information back."

While many may not realize or even think about it, TikTok is as much of a source of information as many news outlets. Narisi said he believes that if TikTok were permanently banned in the future, it would create a void in the world of news.

"Especially since everybody gets your most people get to move news from social media... that's where you do your research," Narisi said. "You don't go to the library like in the old days. So social media is a good place to mine for information."

While some find the digital age intimidating, it cannot be denied that social media is a crucial part of journalism and the majority of the world's daily lives. Narisi said he believes banning apps is a step backward the world should not take.

"I mean, you get people's opinions, you can take the pulse of a community, and if you take that away, then you're kind of in the dark again," Narisi said.

ART IN THE OZARKS

CRYSTAL BRIDGES: A SYMPHONY OF ART AND NATURE

By combining art and nature, the American spirit is showcased in the Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art in Bentonville, Arkansas. The museum opened on November 11, 2011, as a public non-profit charitable organization and offers free admission. The amenities include a restaurant, coffee bar, library, walking trails and programs like lectures and performances for all ages.

Di Ann Fure, a Crystal Bridges volunteer, has been at the museum for 13 years. She said there were displays and advertisements for the museum when it first opened, so she and her husband decided to partake in some of the classes like photography.

"They also had different traveling exhibits, which were also very interesting, so I knew that I wanted to volunteer when they opened here," Fure said.

Fure said she had fun volunteering because "everybody was in awe" since the museum is not like anything they had seen before in the Northwest Arkansas area. The exhibitions and programs piqued the visitors' interests by giving the families places to rest and explore their creativity.

"They also had lots of children coming through and lots of educators and places like this where they could do their own art," Fure said.

Fure's favorite area to volunteer at is the studio. She said she enjoys seeing the children come with their families to create art.

"It's always fun to be in the studio and see the different people and their creativity," Fure said.

The School of Art in the Fulbright College of Arts and Sciences offers free shuttle services to University of Arkansas students to and from campus to Crystal Bridges. Faculty members can even take their classes to the museum or to The Momentary, a satellite contemporary art space opened by Crystal Bridges.

"They send buses or contract with the school to bring the buses and the teachers and chaperones to come to the museum," Fure said.

Crystal Bridges brings people from all over the country and even people from out of the country. There is always something that is happening every day.

"People should come and see," Fure said. "Crystal Bridges is always welcoming everyone."

ALMOST TO THE FINISH LINE

The Arkansas Union reintroduced two familiar spaces to the student body this spring with new and improved features. The Multicultural Center (MC) and A6 (Union) floors celebrated their grand re-openings in January and March respectively. The renovations included new study rooms, lounges, updated furniture and more.

Construction on the MC began at the end of the 23-24 school year. During that time, the office was moved temporarily to Garland Avenue beside the University Bookstore so that events could continue without interruption. Now, a year later, the MC is back in the Union with a fresh look. Some of the new features added include a larger kitchen and a space for prayer and meditation, creating much more space for events and social gatherings.

Similarly, the A6 floor has returned after being inaccessible since the end of spring 2024. Jonas Zabriskie, the assistant director for Student Engagement and Outreach for the university, said that before the renovation, “the space was very closed off, making it difficult to navigate the floor. There was no intentional space for students to meet, sit down, study or hang out.”

Now, students who come up to A6 will be greeted with two new study rooms, two new lounges, and a conference room. According to Zabriskie, “With the new study rooms and lounges, we have seen so many more students coming up to the space than we ever did before.”

Students and faculty are encouraged to come and check out these revitalized spaces. The MC hosts various events such as Finals Frenzy and Asian American and Pacific Islander Month. Additionally, A6 houses various student-led organizations including University Programs (UP), Associated Student Government (ASG) and Cardinal Nights.

LOVE AT FIRST PITCH

LOVE FOR THE GAME

While some spent Valentine's Day with chocolates and roses, Razorback fans showed their love in a different way – by packing in at Baum Walker for the baseball season opener.

Junior Randi Mendolia said, "Baseball on Valentine's Day really cured my heart, because this is always a tough holiday for singles."

The Razorbacks, ranked fifth, faced the Washington State Cougars in a four-game series, winning all four games (3-2, 14-2, 5-2, 12-2). Two of these games ended in the seventh inning due to the mercy rule. The Southeastern Conference has a 10-run rule, meaning if a team leads by 10 or more runs, then the game is cut short after the seventh inning.

The unpredictable weather did throw a slight curveball to the original game schedule. The teams were set to play one game per day, Friday through Monday. However, Saturday's game was moved to a double header on Friday.

Mendolia said that baseball is her favorite time of the year, which is what helped lead her to her choice of study.

"My mom has always told me I went to my first baseball tournament when I was two weeks old," Mendolia said. "I feel like baseball is in my blood. The game can be long and slow at times, but I always find myself back at the ballpark. It's how I found photography, which is what I will be pursuing my career in."

While fans enjoyed the action, student media employees worked hard to make it all happen. Jack Roach, a student employee behind the scenes, spent Valentine's Day ensuring a smooth gameday experience. Roach works for the Razorback Sports Network and was assigned with running the main replay camera during the game.

"I didn't have to follow every routine play, but I got to go after the highlight plays and the really exciting stuff," Roach said. "It's one of the tougher cameras to run, but also one of the more rewarding because when you get a really good shot you know you did your job well."

Roach, speaking based on the crowd's reaction, said one of the most memorable plays was a walk off sac fly by third baseman Brent Iredale (10) in the 10th inning.

"The crowd was full of life for every game and was a big boost for the team," Roach said. "The Razorback baseball fans have been the driving force behind this team for forever."

READY UP

NOSTALGIC ARCADE BUSINESS IN FAYETTEVILLE

Opened in 2012, Arkadia Retrocade is a video arcade located in Fayetteville's Evelyn Hills Shopping Center. Customers are welcome to play arcade games varying from Pacman to Street Fighter, for however long as they desire after paying the 5 dollar cash only fee.

Owner Shea Mathis said he started the arcade business because of unemployment. He had never owned a business before, and when he was out of a job, Mathis said he decided not to go back to doing the same work.

"I grew up with arcades, but they died out probably in the early 2000s or so," Mathis said. "Nobody in this state had done anything like this, so I opened this place and people have been showing up ever since."

Mathis collected arcade games from sales and auctions. After retrieving them, he and his coworkers hotwired them for customers to freely play. People around the community even donated posters, old toys and arcade games.

"When I was a little dude, the movie theaters used to have a little arcade in front of a few games," Mathis said. "They don't even do that anymore these days, and it's harder to find the older games."

The layout of the games is "a bit of feng shui" according to Mathis. He organized the most popular games towards the front of the store, so they are the first opportunities customers see when they walk in. He has games ranging from the early 80s to the late 90s.

"There's a bit of a timeline in the way everything's laid out," Mathis said.

Mathis named the arcade after the realm Arcadia in Greek mythology. He said he was also inspired by an old French Japanese collaborative anime in the 80s called Les Mondes Engloutis, which was Americanized in Nickelodeon as Spartakus and the Sun Beneath the Sea. He spelled his project with a "k" in reference to Arkansas and for phonetic purposes.

"The world they lived in under the ocean was called Arcadia," Mathis said. "I would wake up early in the mornings to watch that cartoon and always remembered that magical land."

Mathis said he thinks people are paying for "nostalgia for the old days" when they come to his arcade. He said as a small business owner who struggles, it is the community support that keeps it alive.

"They kept me alive for 10 years, and I appreciate that," Mathis said. "A small business like mine relies on the community here for support, and I hope that I can be supportive of the community in return."

THE BOYS ARE BACK

FRAT SPRING BID DAY

Many incoming University of Arkansas students are drawn to the school because of the incredibly prevalent Greek Life culture. While fall semester rush and bid day receive extensive coverage, the spring rush process often goes unnoticed. Many boys who were on the fence about rushing in the fall or did not receive a bid, look forward to spring rush.

Freshman Tristan Issitt participated in both fall and spring rush and was excited to receive a bid from Sigma Nu during the spring rush process.

Unfortunately, 2025's rush week was hit with some unexpected obstacles as the Feb. 18th snowstorm hit Northwest Arkansas, trapping students in their homes, apartments and dorms.

"The rush process during the snow was definitely a lot different than in the fall," Issitt said. "The times at the houses shortened because of the weather so that sped up the overall process of rush."

As someone who participated in both the fall and spring rush, he was able to provide some insight into the differences between the two.

"In my opinion, spring rush was a much better experience," Issitt said. "It was much easier to talk to rush chairs because the groups of rushees was [were] much smaller."

This personal contact and connection with the current members of the fraternity is crucial when choosing which houses the potential new members want to pursue or join. In the fall, huge numbers of rushees can be overwhelming and add stress to the process.

Spring bid day was originally scheduled for Feb. 22, but the snow was unyielding to plans anywhere on campus. The Interfraternity Council was forced to reschedule for safety, and bid day was held on Feb. 24 in the evening. This year's winter storms created an unexpected, different experience for the brand-new pledge class of 2025, kicking off their Greek life with a twist.

HOME AWAY FROM HOME

The study abroad program has sent students to 51 countries, including Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, Japan and Mexico. Students from all different backgrounds have had the opportunity to travel the world.

One student, junior Meg Duncan, studied in Italy through the CIMBA, Consortium Institute of Management and Business. “I studied abroad through the CIMBA, the program, and it was in Paderno del Grappa, Italy. Which is a few miles outside of Venice in the mountains,” Duncan said.

The CIMBA program is used by many different American universities that send students abroad. Other American universities such as Kansas State University, University of Iowa and Oklahoma State University, implement this program as well, noting its popular use.

Duncan traveled to Italy with a group of Pi Beta Phi sorority sisters, but left the trip with friends from many different universities.

“I still have a group chat with a lot of people we met that go to KU and Mizzou. We text in it a lot,” Duncan said.

Not only did she make friends from other schools, but Duncan also connected with other Arkansas students. “There were even girls that went to Arkansas that I didn’t know, and one of them is my best friend now and I met her studying abroad. It is never too late to make friends, at any point in college,” Duncan said.

In contrast, freshman Hudson Roberts had a plan to study abroad in Belgium without knowing any other students. “I think it will be fun because I don’t know many other engineering students. I think it will be a good way to connect with them and make some new friends in my major,” Roberts said.

Roberts did research to ensure he would be able to study abroad affordably. “Also, the honors college offers so many scholarships. I applied for their Departmental Study Abroad Scholarship and they’re paying for a portion of my trip,” Roberts said.

“I took a Greek Mythology class. It was my favorite class I have ever taken, and I just know I wouldn’t have taken that here,” Duncan said. The study abroad program allows students to create a more diverse classroom experience for themselves and the world around them.

DISTINGUISHED LECTURES

DLC COMMITTEE MEMBER SHARES INVOLVEMENT

The Distinguished Lectures Committee hosts a variety of guest speakers each year for University of Arkansas students, as well as being open to the public. This year, lecturers included Brittany Broski; Gov. Asa Hutchinson; athletes Hunter Woodhall and Tara Davis-Woodhall; and Jerry Rice.

Elizabeth Gunderman, junior political science and African and African American studies major from Fayetteville, served as the communications chair for the DLC. Growing up in Fayetteville, she said that attending some of these lectures inspired her to participate once she got to the U of A.

"I attended one with Gloria Steinem, and that made me realize I have to be a part of this," Gunderman said.

Since her freshman year, she said that she has gotten to attend many of the lectures, but now, she gets to participate in facilitating discussions with guests. When former governor Asa Hutchinson came to give a talk, Gunderman was one to ask him questions as part of the lecture.

"As a political science major and someone who lived in Arkansas and knows Arkansas politics pretty well, it was cool to get to ask," Gunderman said. "It was cool to see what he thought."

In March, Olympian couple Hunter Woodhall and Tara Davis-Woodhall delivered a lecture at the Fayetteville Town Center. The event was a collaboration between the DLC and the ASG mental health team.

"It was a mental health focused lecture," Gunderman said. "A lot of the questions were centered around how to preserve mental health and the health of a relationship while competing in the Olympics. Not everyone in the audience is an Olympian or an athlete, but they still have valuable lessons they can share with the rest of the group."

In late October, comedian and influencer Brittany Broski also visited Fayetteville's Town Center to speak.

"That lecture was more of just talking to Brittany," Gunderman said. "She was living essentially a normal life and then blew up on TikTok and now has another life of being an influencer, which is a really cool perspective."

The DLC brings in a variety of speakers from athletes to politicians, to influences and other prominent figures.

"With different speakers, you reach a different demographic," Gunderman said. "I have been exposed to different groups of people that I wouldn't have necessarily interacted with on campus."

The DLC brings the Northwest Arkansas community together by opening these lectures to the public in addition to its student population.

"I like seeing the people that come in and what they're excited about," Gunderman added.

40 MILES OF NATURE

The Arkansas Greenway is a 40-mile paved trail created in the 1990s to connect the small communities of the Northwest Arkansas area together. The trail extends from Fayetteville to Bella Vista, passing through the University of Arkansas, Bentonville, Springdale and more.

Along the length of the trail, there are popular NWA restaurants, shops and parks. For the students at the U of A, the greenway always offered a familiar and enjoyable opportunity to walk, run and bike around campus.

For sophomore Meredith Wright, a section of the greenway was always accessible for her since it was right outside the Pi Beta Phi house.

“I had never used the greenway much, but one night I decided to ride a scooter back to Pi Phi and it turned into such a peaceful, unexpected adventure,” Wright said. “The trail was quiet, and some parts were lit by streetlamps which made it feel super safe.”

In addition to providing a safe, environmentally friendly mode of transportation, it also brought friends together and gave them free and easy places to gather at. Fayetteville local Alexis Pruitt enjoyed exploring the random odds and ends of the trail with her friends.

“There are lots of different gazebos and parks for people to mingle at,” Pruitt said. “I also found a little bridge over by Clear Creek and discovered that it’s really pretty in the winter.”

Such close access to easy transportation and outdoor activities is a rare amenity, but comes as a huge perk for students while attending the U of A.

SPRING BREAKAWAY

The start of spring brings warm weather, and for students, it also signals new adventures as the long-awaited spring break begins. Some clutch boarding passes for flights home, while others pile into packed cars, all ready for road trips to beaches, mountains, or family gatherings.

For sophomore Sarah Stewart, this year was about embracing the comfort of home. She returned to Little Rock, where she immersed herself in simple joys, a welcome change after months of pushing through the demands of college life.

"I focused on eating my favorite food, exploring new restaurants, watching TV and simply resting," Stewart said.

As a graphic design major, she said breaks are crucial for recharging, working through burnouts and ending the school year on a good note.

"I had a lot of burnouts beforehand, so stepping away from work helped me come back calmer, with a new sense of creativity," Stewart said. "I use the inspiration from my fun time to influence the creative work I do in my graphic design classes."

Compared to the trip she took last year to Chicago, going home this year cut down on the stress of coordinating and booking months in advance to make sure everything went smoothly. This gave her the chance to slow down and appreciate the comforts she had missed.

"There's definitely value in going home, seeing your family and having the food that's so familiar to you, especially when you don't have regular eating habits in college," Stewart said.

While many students spend spring break chasing new adventures, Stewart found hers by returning to what felt most familiar. She said that spring break doesn't have to feel overwhelming or like something you need to plan around what everyone else is doing.

"I think that with spring break, you don't always have to do the same thing over and over or have the biggest adventure," Stewart said. "What matters most is looking at what you need at the time."

LOVE FOR DANCE

For 20 years, Claudia Aguilar has been sharing her passion for dance and encouraging fitness among the Arkansas community. She always loved being active through dance and being able to move her body freely, but Aguilar wanted to extend her love for dance beyond herself. So sixteen years ago, she received her Zumba certification.

Starting from humble beginnings, Aguilar started as a Zumba instructor at an apartment complex along with a former co-partner. As their Zumba sessions became more popular among guests than tenants, Aguilar realized that it was time to find other venues to host their gatherings.

"We were looking for a place to use to rent for an hour or two," Aguilar said. "We [began] renting it once a week and then we started doing it three times a week. And then we were renting it out for entire days because it was becoming very popular."

With their growing popularity, people wanted more fitness options other than Zumba. Aguilar soon gained certifications in other formats, such as bachata and salsa, and added them to the sessions.

These certifications allowed her to connect more with her Latin culture. "I was taking a lot of trainings, and I took some certifications in different formats. And then I learned how to dance. Even though I am Latina, I didn't know all the correct forms for the dances," Aguilar said.

Combined with people wanting to learn more dances and sharing her Latin heritage, Aguilar founded En Fuego, which translates to "on fire."

Every Sunday, Six Twelve Coffeehouse & Bar opens its doors for En Fuego Latin Dance Night. With a fee of $15, people can enjoy a one-hour dance lesson from 6 to 7 p.m. and a three-hour social dance from 7 to 10 p.m., where people socialize and dance to their hearts' content. Those who only want to attend the social dance can pay a reduced fee of $10.

SOY SPRINGTIME OF YOUTH

ROCKIN' THE LOT

What do Ross Lynch, bubble tea and crochet earrings have in common? They were all part of this year's Springtime of Youth festival, where students gathered at the Baum Walker Stadium parking lot, on April 12 for an afternoon of live music, local vendors and weekend fun.

U of A Headliners plans and hosts "SOY" each year. The 2025 event featured local openers Pura Coco, Malibu Moon and The Belladonnas, leading into performances by headlining artists The Driver Era, Teezo Touchdown, bbno$ and Trevor Daniel.

Tickets were free for students through the app HogSync and $37 for the public. Attendees enjoyed local food trucks such as Swag Banh Mi and Sweet Scoops, plus local vendor booths such as Hunnibun Collective and SIEWVTG.

Anniston Anderson, senior public health major, attended SOY for the first time this year. Although Anderson mainly recognized the band The Driver Era, she said she joined in for the overall experience.

"I enjoy live music, so when my friends asked if I wanted to go, I was down," Anderson said. "I am definitely a Driver Era fan because I was a Ross Lynch fan when I was younger. 'When You Need a Man' is probably one of my favorites, but the crowd was by far the loudest for 'On My Own' from the Teen Beach Movie."

Student Abbie Petersen experienced SOY from two different perspectives, as a performer and a planner. Petersen is a bassist in The Belladonnas and a committee member of Headliners. Outside of house shows, The Belladonnas had only performed at a small venue in downtown Fayetteville.

"We have our close circle of friends that come to all our shows, but it was strange to look out in the crowd and see acquaintances that I have," Petersen said. "It's like 'oh, they're seeing us up on that stage playing our songs, this is crazy,' but it's nice to see that support and familiar faces when you're doing something that's so out of your comfort zone"

Petersen said that planning for SOY typically starts near the beginning of summer and while choosing the headliners is a group effort, her specific role was centered around managing the local artists.

"The most exciting and rewarding part of it was getting to see all of the local artists up on stage and having fun," Petersen said. "They worked so hard, and now they can say that they opened for The Driver Era. It's awesome to see them uplifted in that way."

DAY AT THE MARKET

FLOWERS, VEGGIES, AND FRUIT, OH MY

Just minutes from campus, the local farmer's market offers students, faculty and residents a chance to shop fresh, support small businesses and enjoy a break from big-box grocery stores. More than just a weekend errand, the market fosters sustainability and community while giving students a more direct approach to grocery shopping and meal preparation. For many, college is the first time young adults cook for themselves, making fresh clean and healthy ingredients more valuable than ever.

Donilyn Rutherford always dreamed of owning a small shop when she worked retail management, but life took her in a different direction. Years later however, she would find herself asked to sell onions on her day off, and she never looked back.

"When I first started, onions and herbs weren't making what I expected, but I quickly realized students looked forward to warm, homemade treats, "she said. "They give the market energy, and in return, the market gives them a taste of home."

For students like sophomore M.Bennett at the Farmer's market is about more than just clean food and vegetables. "it's a more local, personal way to shop," sophomore M said. "It makes grocery shopping and meal planning easier when you have someone talking you through the experience."

Many students value the convenience, high quality, and deeper connection they gain with their meals, as these factors contribute to a more seamless and local experience. It significantly enhances accessibility to clean, nutritious eating.

More than a place to buy produce, the farmer's market is where students and local vendors come together. It fosters sustainability, supports small businesses, but mainly it offers students a welcoming space and a taste of home—one product at a time.

SPRING INTO SUMMER

EARTH MONTH ON CAMPUS

While spring in Fayetteville is often recognized for its blooming tulips and bustling trails, others who have a passion for nature and sustainability rally together to celebrate Earth Month. Throughout the city and on campus, there are multiple events that highlight the importance of the planet while bringing people together.

Earth Month is important to many students on campus, with groups such as Zero Hour, Sierra Student Coalition and the Office of Sustainability, who work hard to put on events in the spring.

Environmental water science major, Caroline Cheek, works with multiple different registered student organizations to assist in Earth Month festivities, noting Earth Week Festival at the Union as one of her favorite events.

“Earth Week Festival is always really fun, just because we get to talk to a lot of new faces,” Cheek said. “Bringing people into sustainability in the smallest sense is so important.”

Zero Hour hosted its second “Party Like It’s 2050” celebration, where students and vendors got together to celebrate sustainability and environmental justice.

“It’s like a big night of celebration in hopes that in 2050, the world will be fixed,” Cheek said. “We are fighting for it, and so we just celebrate the good and the big strides that we have taken so far.”

For Fayetteville citizens and students, these Earth Month celebrations heighten awareness for the Earth while also celebrating the beginning of spring. Education on sustainability and environmental justice within these celebrations can allow people to ensure that the future spring seasons in Fayetteville will hopefully be just as gorgeous as it is this year.

HANDMADE IS THE WAY

ART SCHOOL MARKET

Student art and a sense of community filled the University of Arkansas' campus on May 3 as the Spring Art Market returned, drawing crowds of students, faculty and local residents to support U of A's creative talent.

Organized by the School of Art, the market featured dozens of student vendors selling hand-crafted goods, from ceramics to prints to jewelry.

Among them was Emilia Roy, a sophomore graphic design major who also participated in the Winter Art Market.

"The prep for the art market for me is making three to five new paintings, which take about 30 minutes each," Roy said. "Then I scheduled an appointment at the AT2D lab in the Studio Design Center where I got help with formatting and printing my work."

Roy meticulously prepared each piece, adding personalized stickers, protective sleeves, and this time - business cards. On market day, she arrived early with her prints, a bouquet of flowers and a Venmo QR code.

"It's always a great time," Roy said. "I really enjoy interacting with customers, it's so fulfilling."

Beyond sales, the event offered students real-world experience in marketing, presentation and business. The organizers also provided logistical support by guiding students through tax forms at the end of the process.

After the markets, artists are left not only with profit, but connections and confidence in their craft.

121 FINAL HURRAH

123 SEMESTER RECAP

FINAL GOODBYES

IT ISN'T GOODBYE, IT'S SEE YOU LATER.

With graduation around the corner, more than five thousand degree-expecting students are feeling all sorts of emotions before finally gaining their diplomas. The 2025 University of Arkansas Spring Commencement hosts various locations and times for all academic colleges. It will last for two consecutive days on May 9 and 10, with livestreams available for viewing.

Trinity Allen, a senior majoring in social work, remembered the ups and downs of her journey at the university. She said she felt as though she was supported by the community because the university made her realize that the people she surrounds herself with are important.

"When I first came to college, eighteen-year-old me felt like this was going to end," Allen said, "and now, I'm twenty-two, graduating, and ready to go and meet the world. I felt supported and relieved to be done."

Allen said she spent her first year of freshman year solidifying her major. Even though she knew her desired career path, she said she felt the depth of how different college was from high school.

"I never had to study in high school, but then I came here and have no clue how to study," Allen said. "By the second semester, I kind of got the hang of it."

Allen claimed she believes her sophomore year was easy for her because she enjoyed her classes and joined the Social Work Program and got more involved on campus.

"This is when I learned that if you love what you do, you never work a day in your life because you just love it," Allen said.

When Allen tried to balance her academics and personal life, she said she failed a lot because there were times she felt like she had ample time to be productive but ended up procrastinating.

"I reminisce and realize I wouldn't have gotten out of this class with my two friends," Allen said. "I've always been very independent, but the university made me realize that community is important to who you are."

FIJI BANNED ON CAMPUS

The fraternity Phi Gamma Delta, "FIJI," was suspended from the University of Arkansas campus for a minimum of three years. The decision was made on Dec. 3, 2024, after a disciplinary trial in which chapter officers admitted to several violations of student code and Greek Life Social Policy.

Some of the violations include underage drinking, physical injury of members, and failure to comply with university officials. The investigation was done in collaboration with Phi Gamma Delta National, which wrote that the chapter was found "unanimously guilty" of all charges.

Rachel Eikenberry, director of the office of student accountability, stated that the organization "may not formally or informally gather past or current students on campus." Additionally, the fraternity was required to pay a $2,000 conduct assessment fee by Feb. 25, 2025.

Despite the suspension of activities, the membership status of those involved will not be affected. However, continued "underground" activity acting as or like the chapter could result in expulsion, according to Phi Gamma Delta National.

Residents of the fraternity house were given a deadline of Dec. 13 to vacate the premises. Eikenberry warned that retaliation, harassment or vandalism resulting from the suspension would result in individual charges under the Code of Student Life.

The Dean of Students, Melissa Harwood-Rom, offered alternate arrangements through University Housing, including 20 spaces at The Marshall, an off-campus apartment complex. Students were also informed of additional support services such as UA Cares and CAPS.

FIJI will be eligible for reinstatement in January of 2028. In the fall of 2029, they will be eligible to request return to the Phi Gamma Delta house.

HEY, BATTER BATTER

RAZORBACK BASEBALL ENJOYED A RECORD BREAKING SEASON

The 2025 Arkansas Razorback baseball team saw another incredible season while being led by Coach Dave Van Horn. Horn achieved his 1500th career win after beating Georgia 13-3 on April 11, 2025. Of these 1500 wins, 40 come from this season alone – Razorbacks being the first team in the country to have 40 wins.

An exciting weekend series displayed the team's talent as they swept #1 Texas at home on May 3, 2025. The home field advantage was not limited to the games against Texas, as the Razorbacks' home record is 30-3. In addition to the exceptional record, the overall batting average is .316, with eight pitchers having an average score over .300. Arkansas sat at #1 in the SEC for runs, with a total of 454 this season, placing the team at 4th overall in the nation. The team was also nationally ranked 4th for home runs, with a grand total of 102.

With a combined total of 29 home runs, 117 RBIs and 386 at-bats, the Aloy brothers are far from short of star status within the team. Sacramento State transfer, Wehiwa Aloy, is highly ranked in multiple categories: 14th in home runs, 6th in runs and 12th in hits. The two brothers have the highest batting averages on the team, with Wehiwa Aloy batting .376 and Kuhio Aloy batting .359. Playing in almost every game, the Aloy brothers continue to prove their skills and outstanding team performance.

The Arkansas Razorback baseball team continues to build momentum each year, with 2025 being a great example of what a strong team looks like. With star-studded players such as the Aloy brothers, consistency and dedication, Arkansas had a chance to advance to the College World Series.

RAZORBACKS WELCOME HALL OF FAME COACH JOHN CALIPARI AS THE 14TH MEN'S BASKETBALL COACH

In 2024, the University of Arkansas introduced John Calipari as its new head men's basketball coach. Lawson Blake, a senior forward, played for the Razorback basketball team for four years, meaning he experienced the transition between coaches.

"To be a part of the actual change, it's been very different," Blake said. "Coach Calipari is someone that I've always really looked up to."

He added that he has enjoyed getting to play with different teams and coaches throughout his career. Blake is from Fayetteville and said that he grew up as a Razorback fan.

"I love the university and the culture and wanted to be part of what is being built here," Blake said. "This just always felt like home to me, and I couldn't imagine myself anywhere else."

Coach Calipari came to the U of A from the University of Kentucky where he won a national championship in 2012. He was also inducted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame. However, the Razorbacks struggled at the beginning of SEC play, losing their first five conference games.

"It was frustrating because we knew that we could do it," Blake said. "I think we had seen flashes of it all year that we had a really good team. We had the pieces that we needed to make an impact in the league."

Through these challenges, Blake said that the coaching staff did a great job of keeping the team encouraged and ensured they were working hard.

"Coach Calipari does a great job of making us feel a part of the family and keeping us encouraged. He has our back in whatever we do," Blake said.

On their sixth conference game of the season, the Razorbacks earned a win against the University of Georgia, with a score of 68-65.

"I knew we could do it," Blake said. "To get that first one, we needed it to hopefully go on a streak."

Since that first conference win, the Razorbacks beat multiple of the country's top-ranked teams, committed to learning from the struggles and being the best they can be.

IZZY'S GOT GAME

HIGGENBOTTOM SHARES INSIGHT INTO HER SEASON AS A RAZORBACK

The women's Razorback basketball team kicked off the 2024-2025 season with a win against Northeastern State (88-54) in Bud Walton Arena. On the court, Izzy Higginbottom brought leadership, resilience and scoring power.

"This year I had a really heavy leadership role on and off the court," Higginbottom said. "I really was a lead by example person. On the court, my role was primarily to score and get us some buckets."

She did exactly that and made history along the way. On Feb. 3, Higginbottom became the fourth player in U of A history to score 40 points in a game, helping deliver a memorable, winning performance against Florida.

"I think my favorite memory was of us winning our first SEC game of the season and everyone pouring water on me and Coach Neighbors," Higginbottom said.

All of U of A's athletes, including the women's basketball team, are committed to doing their best at the university off the court as well.

"Challenges I have faced include self-doubt, fear of disappointment and then the overall grind of trying to be the best that I can be in the basketball arena while also staying on top of schoolwork and deadlines," Higgenbottom said. "I've overcome all of these challenges by refocusing on being present and enjoying the process towards succeeding at my goals and vision."

Her mental approach became a key part of her preparation. "I would really reflect on the work I put in and how prepared I was, just focusing on being relaxed and confident." said Higgenbottom.

As the Razorbacks move forward, Higginbottom's example, both in scoring and in steady leadership, sets a strong foundation for the program's future.

ARKANSAS MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY TEAM CLAIM SECOND IN A ROW SEC TITLE

The third-ranked University of Arkansas men's cross country claimed their victory for the second consecutive year at the 2024 SEC Cross Country Championship Meet on November 1, 2024. The Razorbacks had three of the top 10 finishers in the men's 8K race. A few weeks prior, the team also won at the Pre-National Invitational meet.

Sophomore Arkansas runner, Brian Masai, said that winning at the Pre-National Invitational allowed him to gain confidence in the meet preparation process.

"It gives me the confidence to trust in the preparation and skills we build in training," Masai said.

Masai said that everyone on the team was happy after the Pre-Nationals win and that the victory gave the team confidence to keep going.

"Preparation for big meets or championships is to set your mind and focus, and you have to believe in yourself," he said.

He said that he plans to take that with him all the way to the National Championship meet, which he said is the team's ultimate goal. Masai said he enjoyed competing against high-level competition in the SEC Championship.

"Competing against the best teams always gives me the opportunity to see how ready I am for the bigger competition," Masai said.

"It also helps me identify areas where I have some weaknesses," he said.

Masai said that the weather at the SEC tournament was pleasant and that he enjoyed the running course since it did not have very many hills. He also said that the team's goal does not end at winning an SEC championship.

"As a team, we had a lot of confidence as our goal is to try and win the national title," Masai said.

Masai said that the team displayed confident enthusiasm in their reaction to the championship win.

"We knew we were among the best, so we were just going to confirm that we were the best." Masai said. "Everyone was so happy for the win."

FESTIVAL FUN

RAZORBACK SOPHOMORE WINS BIG AT HOME

The University of Arkansas women's cross country competed in the NCAA Regional Meet on November 15, 2024. The team claimed its 13th consecutive victory in the NCAA South Central Regional Meet. Razorback sophomore Paityn Noe, tied for the individual title.

Noe noted that the competition was elevated compared to previous years with many schools having very strong teams.

"Winning the regional meet was super exciting because we won as a team, and I was able to get the individual title," she said.

Noe said that competing in the regional meet felt tense since it was the most important race of the season up until that point. She also said that it is "a fun environment to race in."

"We have to perform well there in order to make it to the final race of the year," Noe said. "Every girl was able to put it all together when it mattered the most."

As she reflected on the season, Noe declared the victory at the regional meet as her favorite memory of the season.

"We had all worked so hard throughout the season and overcame so much," she said. "Standing on the award stage and calling the hogs with the team was a great memory."

Noe said part of her decision to run for the U of A was the group of girls that was already on the team.

"It makes it so much more enjoyable that I get to go to practice everyday and run with my best friends," she said. "Having great training partners always helps to keep you motivated, especially on hard days."

The regional meet victory is a great motivator for the team for next season, Noe stated.

"Going into the national meet, our goal is to perform to the best of our ability," she said. "We will be more experienced and ready to prove ourselves again."

ROCKY FLOP

RAZORBACKS TAKE ON NO.4 TENNESSEE

The Arkansas Razorback football team had an eventful 2024 season, battling through 13 hard-fought games demanding competition and dedication.

Each week, passionate Razorback fans packed stadiums to cheer on the hogs, creating an electric atmosphere fueling the entire zone of players, coaches, fans, band members and dance teams alike. There is no shortage of loud moments full of exclamation of their joy, hog fans have been known to cause many false starts.

The support encouraged one Razorback player, sophomore Quincy Jones Jr. saying, “I’ve always had a love for the game. It has provided me with opportunities and has opened doors that I would have never imagined.”

The home game victory against No. 4 University of Tennessee on Oct. 4, created rippling effects around the Southeastern Conference. With a last-minute win, the Razorback fans celebrated by storming the field and tearing down a goal post. Jones said it was “the most memorable game.”

“I was in on the last drive of the game, and it was extremely loud,” Jones said. “When everyone stormed the field that was an experience of a lifetime.”

Through these high-pressure games, with an importance in perseverance, every play and every lesson learned brought more hope towards better collaboration as a team.

“A few lessons I’ve learned from college football that I’ve taken from the field is that in life, nothing is promised,” Jones reflected. “I learned is not every day is going to be perfect but continue to work at your craft because you can’t forget the goal in mind.”

As the season concluded, the Hogs claimed a bowl game victory, at the Liberty Bowl game against Texas Tech on Dec. 27, wrapping up the season of putting in their hard-earned due diligence.

HOME IS WHERE THE COURSE IS

MEN'S GOLFERS SHARE THEIR EXPERIENCES AS A HOG

The University of Arkansas quickly became home to each and every one of it's students, and this was not different for the Men's Golf Team. Coming to Arkansas from both near and far, this team blended itself to create a force to be reckoned with.

From Córdoba, Argentina, senior Manuel Lozada has played for the University of Arkansas for several years, and he is proud to say that he has been able to make Fayetteville his home.

"It was really hard at first... the culture was a little different, but compared to other places in the U.S., this is closer to what I have back home, so I really like that," Lozada said.

He says that he started golfing later than most, at age fifteen, but grew to love it quickly.

"My whole family plays golf, I grew up right next to a golf course, so I was always surrounded by golf," Lozada said.

It made sense for him to start playing it, and he just so happened to love it. Freshman Jackson McLaughlin had a similar experience falling in love with the sport. Coming from Little Rock, Arkansas, golf is a very prevalent sport.

"I was drawn to golf because of my great-grandfather. He would always go to the course and he took me with him one day and I fell in love with it," McLaughlin said.

These athletes work every day to perfect their craft, and the love that they have for golf shines through their dedication. As they continue to sharpen their skills and deepen their bonds, the University of Arkansas Men's Golf Team exemplifies the spirit of community that defines their home away from home, inspiring future generations of golfers to follow in their footsteps.by Everett Pledger

BLESSINGS BELONGS TO THE HOGS

HOGS BLESS THE GREEN WITH ANOTHER TITLE

The Blessings Collegiate Invitational, a men's and women's golf tournament, occurred at Blessings Golf Club in Fayetteville September 30 to October 2, featuring 10 teams across the nation.

This year, the eighth-ranked University of Arkansas Women's Golf team won, making the victory their fourth Blessings Invitational title in the past five years. One of our own, sophomore Maria José Marin, was crowned MVP of the tournament.

José Marin said that she feels the support of the Razorback community when playing at home.

"Playing at home for me is important." José Marin said. "You feel like everyone is rooting for you."

José Marin said she dreamed of playing golf at a top university with great academic and athletic programs. She said she is honored to play for the University of Arkansas.

"Getting to represent the Razorbacks is a one-of-a-kind opportunity," José Marin said. "We have opportunities here that others do not have at other universities."

José Marin said that this year's Blessings Invitational victory was important. It was her second collegiate individual win, and it the first team win of the season.

"Following those events, good things came," José Marin said. "It gave me a huge confidence boost for the rest of the season."

José Marin said the moment of victory felt great.

"When I made the last shot, everyone cheered for me, and tears started to form in my eyes," José Marin said. "Words cannot express the feeling that I got in that moment and the happiness that I felt."

José Marin said that she plans to work very hard going into the spring season to help the team achieve more titles. She said she wants to win another collegiate tournament to gain more confidence.

"The long term goal is to make it to nationals and have another good representation there," José Marin said. "To follow that up, I want to make the Arnold Palmer Cup Team."

L-S-WHO?

RAZORBACKS TAKE DOWN REIGNING NATIONAL CHAMPS

The “Gymbacks” took down No. 2 and reigning national champion, LSU, in front of a record-breaking crowd on Jan. 24, 2025. The Hog’s final score was 196.875 against the Tigers whose final score was 196.600.

Standout performances from the Hogs included Joscelyn Roberson, who won the All-Around with a score of 39.350, and Frankie Price who received a 10 from a judge for her performance on Floor.

The Hogs performance on Floor helped them break ahead of the Tigers. The Hogs scored 49.525 while the Tigers scored 48.850. Following the meet, the Hogs were ranked at no. 3 nationally on Floor.

Senior Maddie Jones said they knew they were trailing LSU headed into floor. She said they had to go out there, be themselves and trust themselves. “We’re an incredible floor team that loves to put on a show, and that’s exactly what we did, which ultimately helped us get the win,” Jones said.

Bud Walton Arena had a record number of student support at the meet with 1,705 student fans ticketed in attendance.

“Using the crowd to our advantage while also being able to eliminate the noise when it was time to compete,” Jones said about challenges during the meet. “It gets super busy and loud and can sometimes be a lot going on but being able to lock in the team mindset and go up and do our thing was the most important thing.”

Luckily, the Gymbacks feed off of energy and use it to their advantage. They’re also using this win to set up the remainder of their season. Senior Kalyxta Gamiao said that this meet showed that meets are competitive and can be decided at any time.

“We are still in the beginning of our season and to just keep pushing,” Gamiao said. “It gives us confidence that even after a mistake we are able to switch our mindset and continue to be positive and keep going.”

The Hogs had challenging future matchups with Oklahoma and Florida right after and the results of this meet proved that the Hogs are ready for more.

“I think my favorite part [of the meet] was proving that it doesn’t matter who we go against. It all comes down to the end,” Gamiao said.

DAYLIGHT FOR THE RAZORBACKS

COURTNEY DAY SHARES HER EXPERIENCE AT ARKANSAS AS A GRAD TRANSFER

The University of Arkansas softball team boasts a nationally ranked utility player in Courtney Day. She transferred to the U of A in 2024 as a graduate transfer and has been able to use her experience to help the team. Day claimed it took a lot of hard work and preparation to get to this point.

"Using my experience, I can be that support system for the younger group and benefit the team however I possibly can," Day said. "I've been in so many pressure situations that I treat every at-bat the same."

After stops at other universities and taking a break due to injury, Day said that playing for the U of A has reignited her love for the game.

"I didn't know if I'd ever feel that love for the game I once had," Day said. "This has changed everything I thought softball could be. It makes me feel like a little girl again learning how to play softball for the first time, and it's brought that love and passion back to the game."

In addition, Day described the importance of the close-knit relationships that she has developed with her teammates.

"Being surrounded by amazing people really helps," Day said. "We're all friends."

Day said one of her favorite memories of the season was beating seventh-ranked Tennessee in a regular season series because it showed the nation "what Arkansas softball can be."

In the 2024-2025 season, the Razorbacks have beaten several of the nation's top teams, including the second-ranked University of Florida. However, the team is yet to earn a trip to the Women's College World Series.

"I think that Arkansas in general has just always been a very underrated team," Day said. "I think that if we were to make it to the World Series, it would show everybody what Arkansas softball truly is and all of the potential that's in this program."

RISING RAZORBACKS

The Arkansas Swimming and Diving team received SEC weekly award nominations over the course of the season.

Majo Sanchez, sophomore, was awarded SEC diver of the week three separate times on Oct. 1, Nov. 5, and Nov. 12, 2024.

“It makes me feel so happy and motivated, it’s definitely something I didn’t see myself achieving,” Sanchez said. “When I got the nomination, it was a big surprise, but at the same time it made me want more, and it makes me want to keep working hard and keep growing from where I am at.”

Sanchez was nominated for her performances in the meets against Drury University where she won 1st place in 1-meter springboard with a score of 290.48, 1st in 3-meter springboard with a score of 314.78, as well as scoring enough points to qualify for NCAA zones. At the TCU and SMU tri-meets, she won platform diving with a score of 319.75, breaking a school record. Her third nomination came from her performance at U of A Little Rock where she placed first in 1-meter springboard with a score of 315.83, first in 3-meter with a score of 345.98.

Ashley Morton, freshman, was awarded SEC freshman of the week on Oct. 1, 2024. Morton received her nomination from her performance against Drury where she swam a time of 2:03.33 in the 200-meter backstroke, winning the event.

“I am really grateful and honestly kind of shocked. It’s always nice to be recognized for all the hard work we put in,” Morton said. “The team and coaches were so supportive from the start and I am so excited for the future.”

Morton, a Georgia native, explained that the switch from high school to college swimming has been a smooth transition thanks to the support and competitiveness of her high school team, allowing her to strive in the college environment.

“Obviously just like any other swimmer, I am setting goal times to hit at the end of the season,” Morton said. “But I’ve noticed that I always perform better when I am enjoying myself and cheering for my teammates.”

SERVING AS ONE

SMILLIE SHARES SEASON REVIEW

The Arkansas Men's Tennis team upset their biggest rival, no. 12 Texas A&M, at home on February 28, 2025, highlighting the importance of bouncing back after a tough loss to no. 18 Tennessee.

According to Sophomore Connor Smillie, this win for the Razorbacks would go on to be his favorite memory from the season.

"Everyone played really well and the energy at home was amazing," Smillie said. "A&M is a huge rival of ours."

The Hogs beat the Aggies 4-1. Notable singles victories included Bozo Braun, Jakub Vrba, and Arthur Bellegy with all 3 defeating their Aggie opponents. In doubles, the pair Braun and Emesz, defeated their opponents, as well as Brenden Boland and Marino Jakic.

Smillie describes doubles winner and senior captain Benni Emesz as his biggest influence on and off of the court.

"He's always been super positive with me and always pushing me to work hard and make the right decisions," Smillie said. "He's always there when I need him the most."

The Razorbacks also had a ranked win against no. 21 Alabama at home on March 18. Smillie claims that the teamwork dynamic helps them support each other through difficult matches.

"Our team dynamic is great and everyone cares for one another like a brother," Smillie said. "I think it really motivates us to do our best for each other on court for every match."

The Men's Razorback Tennis team has a long history of ranked wins, upsets and season victories, however, these are not the only legacies they carry from season to season.

"I would say this season taught us how to be tough and how to bounce back after losses," Smillie said. "As well as how we as a team can support each other and create a culture that goes beyond just this year."

SISTER SETS

STANDOUT SISTERS SHARE THEIR FAVORITE PARTS OF THE SEASON

The 2024-25 season has been one to remember for the Arkansas women's tennis team, marked by standout performances and special moments.

One of the biggest highlights came on March 9, when the Razorbacks secured their first SEC win of the season, defeating Missouri 4-1. Carolina Gómez-Alonso alongside her sister Jimena Gómez-Alonso, helped clinch the victory by winning both their singles and doubles matches.

For Carolina Gómez-Alonso, the season has been filled with unforgettable experiences. "One of the most special tournaments was the All-American in the fall," Carolina Gómez-Alonso said. "It's a tournament where the best college players compete, and traveling with the team made it even more fun."

Another highlight was the team's preseason training at Indian Wells in Palm Springs, where they practiced on the same courts used by the pros.

Playing alongside her younger sister Jimena Gómez-Alonso has made this season even more special. "It's a dream come true for both of us," Carolina Gómez-Alonso said. "We've grown up playing together, so sharing this experience at Arkansas is one of the best things that could have happened to us."

With a strong team spirit and determination, the Razorbacks continue to push forward, making every match an opportunity to grow and compete at the highest level.

ABDALLA GOES THE DISTANCE

WHEN I SAY JUMP, YOU SAY...

Yaseen Abdalla, Track & Field star and Olympian, has completed his college athletic career after five seasons. Abdalla started his college career at the University of Texas at Austin. Before the 2022 season, he transferred to the University of Tennessee Knoxville. In 2024, Abdalla transferred to the University of Arkansas, and he has loved his time as a Razorback.

"I'd say this is the program with the most diversity of excellence, even within the distance program," Abdalla said. "I've never been on a distance program where we have workouts and I'd be the ninth guy across the line and then in races I was like third and then Reuben [Reina] beat me in the mile and then some of the guys beat me at later stuff."

In July of 2024, Abdalla competed in the Paris Olympics representing Sudan and broke their national marathon record with a time of 2:11:41 in his marathon debut.

What I tell people is that a race hurts a certain amount, and you can either spread it out over two hours or you can get it in four minutes for a mile," Abdalla said. "Nothing has ever destroyed my body like the marathon, like I was dead for six days."

In his post-college career, Abdalla plans to turn pro, and he also plans to race in the marathon at the World Athletics Championships. This is set to take place from Sept. 13-21 in Tokyo, Japan.

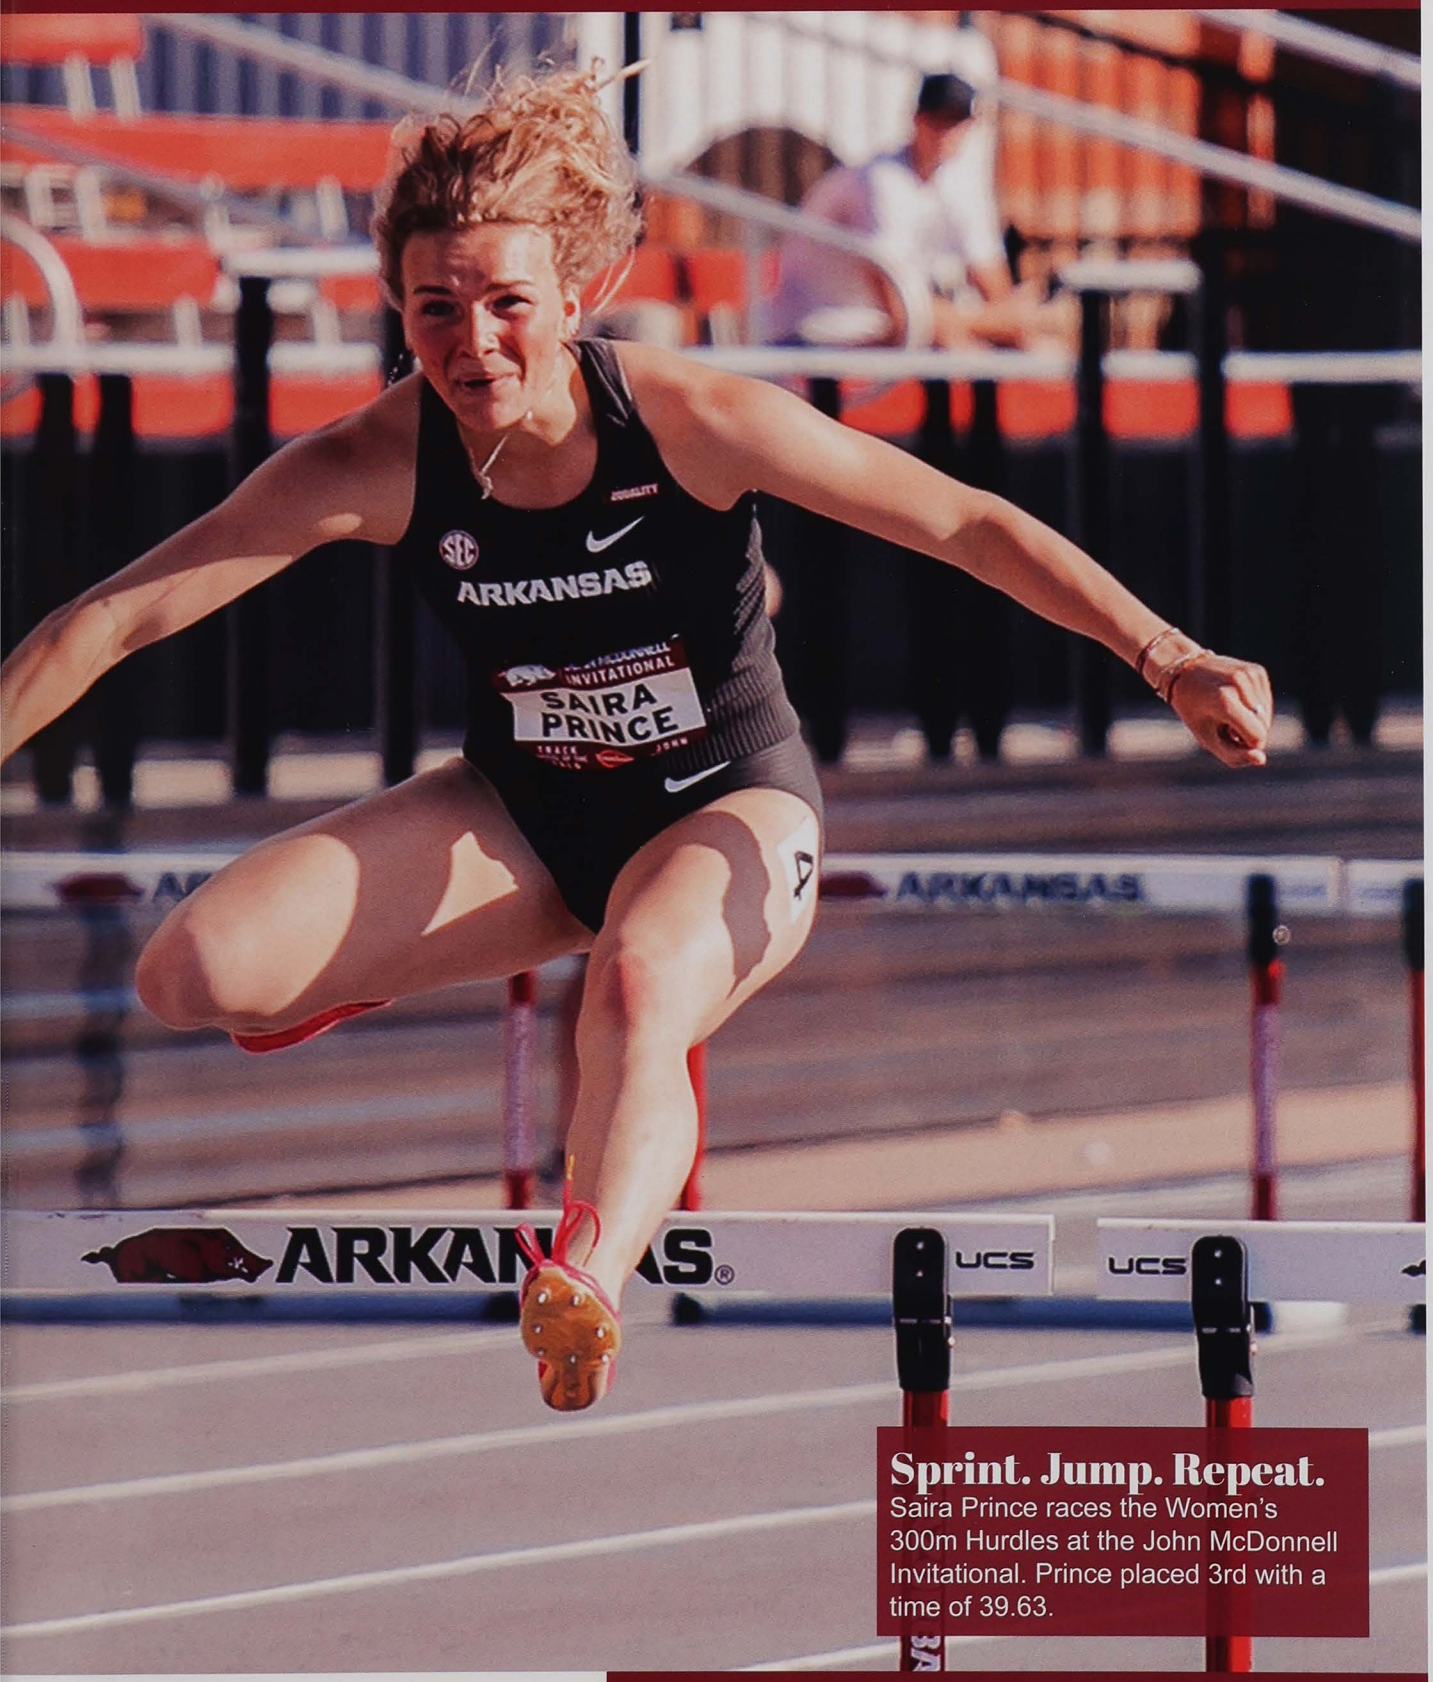
WHITTAKERS WINNING WAY



Sprint. Jump. Repeat.
Saira Prince races the Women's 300m Hurdles at the John McDonnell Invitational. Prince placed 3rd with a time of 39.63.

Crossing the finish line of the 400-meter sprint at the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships, graduate student Isabella Whittaker added her name to the register of record-breaking Razorbacks. A transfer from the University of Pennsylvania, Whittaker's enthusiasm pushed her to new heights at Arkansas.

"I like to think that every time I step on the track, it's an opportunity to really shock the people around me...coming in as a grad student and wild card has been really fun for me because I really get to lean into that underdog mentality," Whittaker said, "The coaches here make you really strong, so your endurance and anaerobic [capacity] are just unmatched... the training really clicked for me and gave me the confidence I needed to come out and be a force."

After placing second in her event earlier in the season at the SEC championships, Whittaker claimed the fastest 400-meter time in national, collegiate and Arkansas program history at the NCAA championship.

"I remember as I crossed the line and I looked at the board, I told myself to really pay attention to what I was feeling because moments pass but I really wanted to hold onto this feeling," Whittaker said. "I was very emotional because we put so much work into this sport and [when] I moved to Arkansas... I left my family and the team I had known to come here, it was a big sacrifice."

Whittaker relied on the support of her family throughout her athletic career.

"I had 30 plus family members in the stands, and I looked for them as soon as I finished," Whittaker said. "I just felt super grateful because they had been there through the highs and lows and I wanted to share that moment with them as well."

"IT FEELS NOSTALGIC. AS SOMEONE WHO HAS GROWN UP GOING TO VOLLEYBALL GAMES IN BARNHILL, I NEVER IMAGINED MYSELF BEING ON THAT COURT."

- ROSANA HICKS, FAYETTEVILLE NATIVE

BACK to BARNHILL

Romani Thurman, daughter of Scotty Thurman, is making her mark on the volleyball court just as her father did on the basketball court. Her parents have instilled in her a yearning for greatness, both on and off of the court. While she loves volleyball and devotes much of her time to it, her 4.0 is incredibly important to her as well. “It is very special and inspiring to me that I have the opportunity to follow in my father’s footsteps.”

Thurman said that her “favorite thing about volleyball is the team aspect.” She loved being able to work with these women day in and day out. In high school, she ran track, which she found to be a much more solitary sport. One of the things she loved about volleyball is “having the opportunity to bond with the women on the team and depend on them.” She started playing volleyball in eighth grade because she loved the energy that the women had on the court and she wanted to be a part of it.

She spent her freshman year playing for the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Originally, Thurman wanted to go to UNC because it was very different and far away and she wanted to discover herself, but decided after a year that Arkansas was a better fit for her.

Thurman felt like a very independent person off of the court and being part of a team has helped her learn to lean on people. She feels that this sport has taught her to understand that she needs people in her corner and that those people want to help her. “I am incredibly lucky to have a coach who prioritizes his players, Coach Jason Watson.”

Thurman had found that oftentimes, the mental health of athletes is put on the back burner. One of the most important things that Thurman has learned throughout her time in volleyball is that it is okay to not be okay. While she loves this sport, she recognizes that there are hardships that athletes, especially female athletes face. These issues cannot just be ignored. “Female athletes have to battle for the same respect that male athletes receive,” said Thurman. Things are slowly changing, but equality in sports is incredibly important and we have to continue to work towards it every day.

"FOR ME, TO MAKE SURE THAT MY TEAMMATES KNOW I LOVE THEM AND CARE FOR THEM AND THAT GOES WAY BEYOND VOLLEYBALL SO I JUST TRY TO BE AVAILABLE OFF THE COURT TO TALK TO THEM ABOUT LIFE, VOLLEYBALL OR JUST ABOUT ANYTHING. IT'S REALLY HARD TO LEAD PEOPLE IF THEY DON'T THINK YOU CARE ABOUT THEM. MAKE SURE THEY KNOW THAT I'M A SHOULDER TO LEAN ON IF THEY NEED TO"
- senior, Hannah Hogue said.

LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Dear readers of the Razorback Yearbook:

When I was brainstorming an idea for the theme of the 2025 Razorback Yearbook, all I could think about was how much I loved this campus and the city of Fayetteville. It's easy to get into a routine at school and forget about how beautiful our campus is. I decided I wanted to create a book that showcases all of the unique qualities that make this our home. Even after degrees are completed, Fayetteville will be a forever home to students. This book can be used to remind yourself of all the memories this campus holds. If you're ever missing Fayetteville, open this book and get a glimpse of home.

As I took on the role of Editor in Chief, I knew I wanted to create a timeless book that students and faculty could cherish forever. The photographs, design, and copy all served to highlight the idea of "home." When creating the book, I couldn't help but think about how much this school and town mean to me. There is nowhere I would rather go to school than the University of Arkansas, and this book shows why.

This book would not exist without the help of all the editors, staff, and faculty that dedicated endless time and offered ample support. Madalyn, thank you for using your design magic on every page of this book. I am in awe of your creativity. Delanie, thank you for keeping everything organized and helping me with every aspect of creating this publication. Isabel, thank you for capturing the beauty of this campus with your amazing photos. You made the book what it is. Lainey, thank you for the work you put into each piece of copy for this book. Your editing skills allowed each story to be great. Allie, thank you for documenting the most important athletic events of the year. Your sports knowledge was essential to production. Diana, thank you for capturing the image of The Razorback on social media and the website. The work you put into each post is what allows this book to succeed. Samantha, thank you for all the tedious work you put into the People, RSO, Greek life, and Index sections. A huge portion of this book would not be complete without you. I cannot imagine doing this without each one of you and without each of our amazing writers, designers, photographers, and online content creators.

I have loved this opportunity to create a book that captures all the love I have for this school. I will always consider the University of Arkansas home.
